ceedings of treason, consisted in the sophistry that a state could not be coerced. If a state desired to leave the Union there was no power vested in the federal authority to prevent its departure or insist upon its return. The same argument or sophistry went on to declare that this Union was constructed by the voluntary surrender of the Commonwealth, which composed it of certain of their local and general possessions, which the same Commonwealth could at any time reclaim, and assume the property and the independent position they sessed and occupied before the construction of the American Union. These assumptions were made by the secret sympathisers with rebellion, before it had burst upon the country, purposely to give it time to gather strength and afford its leaders opportunities to rob the Treasury. While James Buchanan was confessing his want of power to crush the first demonstration at Charleston, his Secretaries were robbing the Treasury and preparing to take possession of or despoil the forts and arsenals located in the states marked out for the future rebel confederacy. The cry against coercion was thus made to subserve a double purpose. Its first was to give treason time, and the second that can be adduced for his conviction. In the fear of that, he cowers and crouches and tremto relieve its natural and political allies, the adbles like a whipped spaniel ; and this record, ministration of James Buchanan and the men brought against the traitors of the Patriot and who clung to it, from the use of any of the Union, has compelled them to strike their colpower with which they were vested in crushing ors, like a captured pirate at sea, and cry for a or arresting rebellion.

THE COERCION OF SECESSION.

One of the great arguments with which the Buchanan administration nursed the initial pro-

The Destruction of the Bridgeport Far mer Office.

The New Haven Palladium of yesterday gives the following particulars of the mobbing of the office of the karmer, the secessionist newspape at Bridgeport, Connecticut :

"A body of four or five hundred persons, fol lowed by thousands of spectators, immediately moved down street. The affair was, apparently a deliberate one, there being little of the hurr that would be ordinarily manifested on such an occasion. It was known that the office had been guarded for several nights and days, and as it was supposed that armed men were at the time within the building, a vigorous resistance was anticipated. It was even believed that preparations had been made some time before or throwing a flood of hot water from the boiler situated in the second story, upon any body of men who might assail the building, but no one had forced the doors.
