HARRISBURG, PA Monday Morning, October 28, 1861.

PASSED THROUGH .- Brig. Gen. Tyler, of the three month's service, who had the command of the centre of the army, in the first advance upon Bull Run, on the 18th of July, passed through town yesterday eastward.

FROM OCEAN TO OCEAN.—A telegraph dispatch in our morning edition, announced the completion of the great overland line of telegraph to California on Friday, and we are informed by the operator in this city that since then hundreds of messages have passed over the wires between New York, Philadelphia and other points direct to San Francisco, Sacramento and other principal towns in the golden state. Any of our citizens having friends in "them diggings" can now have an opportunity of conferring with them telegraphically.

Police Before the Mayor. - Wm. Baker, Wm. Black, Jno. M'Dermott, John Rees and Wm. Davis, the three latter soldiers, were arraigned charged with drunkeness. Put under marching orders for Camp Cameron.

Benj. Wilson-a very nervous individual begged the Mayor to commit him for five days His Honor acceded to his request.

Jno. Wesley-one of the aborigines of the country-claimed the hospitalities of the lockup last night, having no means to pay for his lodgings elsewhere. The poor fellow was laboring under some disease of the eyes, and he stated that he was on his way to Philadelphia to consult some oculist. The Mayor very kindly furnished him with some money and a letter to Mr Young, the Superintendent of the railroad, who passed him to Philadelphia.

Sam. W. Freeburn-the keeper of Military Hall-was charged with having committed an aggravated assault on quite an old man named David Gardner, by striking him over the face with a club "without cause or provocation." A warrant was issued for his arrest, and in the absence of the Mayor a hearing of the case took place before Justice Beader at 7 o'clock on Saturday evening.

Before Alderman Kline .- An intelligent look ing German aged about forty years, who gave hisname as W. C. Maine, was arraigned, charged with attempting to pass a forged check at the Middletown Bank fer $57, purporting to have been signed by Eby & Kunkle, merchants of this city. Sent to prison to answer.

SOOKS FOR THE SOLDIERS, AND HOW TO SAVE HALF THE COST .- The call for knit socks for soldiers is meeting with a cheerful and energetic response from all the ladies in this vicinity.-Notable mothers, sisters, and grandmothers, habituated to such labors, ply their needles over the heavy blue yarn, anxious to contribute Might there not be some organized plan for col lecting the cast-off socks which have good legs, cutting off the feet, washing them nicely, and issuing them from some of the army workingthose who continue the pleasant labor? Such a plan would save nearly one-half the expense and time devoted to the second instalment of socks for the winter, and the aggregate result would be an item of economy, by no means contemptible. THE LITTLE ONES.—Heaven bless the little ones-the joy of our hearts and the light of our homes! Well might the Man of Nazareth, with his warm and appreciative heart, exclaim: "Suffer little children to come unto me and torbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of of Heaven; a place good enough enough for children, and inhabited by children and the childlike! And what a refutation is this of the slander of the innate depravity of the human nature! The little child is yet uncorrupted by contact with the world's wickedness, he is fresh from the hand of the Maker, he is yet true to his God-given nature-ergo, "of such is the kingdom of Heaven." If the Saviour does not refute it, is not the little one himself. prattling innocency, a living refutation? Bless, then, we say, the early trudgers in life's pathway! No home is complete where the patter of little feet is not heard and the lisping cadence of half. spoken household words is not breathed. A little silken haired fairy, we wot of meets her father adown the walk whenever his footsteps, at nightfall, approach the household hearth. That father, homeward bound, we well believe, is rather proud of his juvenile escort. The suns of two summers have kissed the dimpled knee, takes liberty with the paternal whiskers, and occupies an elevated seat at the table.— She manages a few pet words, but for the most hall the virtues to which babies ever at-From a casual acquaintance with the the Me, we are able to endorse the very best United that can be said of her. And it is because we accome her to be a representative of her lass that we are so heartily in favor of miniature huttainity generally. Blessings, then again, we say, upon the babies—especially the two

The description was promptly forwarded, together with a "counterfeit presentment" of the "Colonel's" physiognomy, a number of which he had fortunately left behind him, in the shape of small photographs, which he had distributed among his friends as souvenirs. A copy of one of these has also been sent to the authorities in this city, and it was from the letter accompanying it, that we were enabled to glean the above particulars. The 'Colonel,' we believe, is still on his travels.

We had an opportunity of seeing this tested the other evening in one of our popular restaurants. A company of plain gentlemen and gallant volunteer officers were enjoying themselves, when to their number was added a Major, not a volunteer but a regular, veritable, stripped, buttoned and bombastic Major, swelling with his own conceit and self-estimation. His presence was the signal for change in the company and the courtesy of the occasion. True to his characteristics, he at once commenced to assail and impugn the volunteer soldiery—they were vulgar cowards, they needed the whip to make them fight—and when they did move it was for bread and meat, not glory, as we regulars. Of course such speeches—and we give the spirit, not the language of the Major, because that other spirits of the spirit it peculiar to some bipeds had rendered him incapable of intelligible speech—invoked the resentment of a gallant volunteer captain, physically the inferior of the Major, (being no more than four feet and a hand,) who not only called cheek of the baby-girl.
