The Victory at Drainesville Gallant Conduct of the Men of Penn-

NAMES OF THE KILLED AND WOUNDED.

We have heretofore given the facts in regard to the battle and victory at Drainesville, and now give such details as may be interesting to

General McCall, learning that a rebel squad of about one hundred cavalry were foraging around near Difficult creek, and coming within four miles of his line, he determined to capture them or drive them off, and at the same secure a quantity of forage belonging to some noted rebels at Drainesville.

On Friday night he ordered out General Ord's Brigade, with one day's rations, to start at day-light. He also took Easton's pattery and four squadrons of cavalry and forty-five wagons, in charge of Capt. Hall. He started them on with instructions to secure the forage, and after they left he heard that there were some Rebels near Herndon's Station, on the railroad, who might give them trouble, and knowing General Ord's disposition for fighting so well, he ordered out General Reynolds' Brigade, as a reserve, on the turnpike, and with his staff galloped on towards Drainesville. In the meantime, General Ord had marched to Drainesville, and with his troops in the fol-lowing order:—Advance guard, Kane Rifles, lowing order:—Advance guard, kane kines, Easton's battery, four squadrons of the First Pennsylvania Cavalry, with the Tenth, Sixth and Twelfth Regiments. The regiments were about one hundred rods apart, and as the skirmishers of the Ninth were scouring the woods this side of Drainesville, as their regiment was entering the village they found the Rebels secreted in the woods. Loose firing at once com-menced. It was now about half-past one, P. M. Gen. Ord, who was in advance, at once rode to the spot where the firing commenced, and drew up his troops in line of battle. Easton's battery took up their position in front of Thorn's house, and Companies A and N of the Kane Rifles were deployed down the road run-ning to Centreville. When about five hundred yards down seven squadrons of Stuart's caval-ry galloped from one field to another, in front, as though they were retreating, feeling we were coming down on them in force.

The Rifles halted for fear of being entrapped, when bang went a cannon in front, not a hundred yards off, and a shot from a rifled cannon whizzed over their heads, and took the top off a house where Easton's battery was located. The Rides dropped down on their faces, and the Kentucky riflemen opened a volley upon them. They fell back, and were reinforced by other of their companies, and then opened a firing wherever they could see a chance.

Easton now opened on them with three guns —twenty four and one twelve—sending his other round to the Hill, to keep them from outflanking them. Their six guns were now pouring out incessant fire, and the Sixth Regiment on his right were firing rapidly at the edge of the woods, where the rebels were concealed in thick gines. The rebel cannon shot nearly all went over their heads.

When the position of the rebel battery was found out pretty certain, Easton let drive, and his third shell exploded in the caisson of the Just then Gen. McCall and his staff rode up, Ord on the disposition of the forces, and then proceeded to give orders.

proceeded to give ord placed to get under cover, a la rebels. General McCall rode up, flourishing his sword, and cried out to them to "Forward, boys! stand your ground," The rebels now saw their chance. and down from the extreme left came a regi ment in light blue overcoats, with the Stars and Stripes waving over them.

One of their officers cried out, "Do not shoot, we are Bucktails." Our men consequenty reserved their fire, until one of the officers cried out, "it's a lie, give them h—l, boys." Before the word died away, however, the rebels fired and started for cover. Our troops gave them a voily with fearful effect, their balls nearly all d over the heads of our men.

The artillery were now throwing their shells The arthery were now unrowing their shear into the woods. The rebels had ceased firing from their battery, and were trying to get their men to make a charge, but without success.—
The hail of lead that now rained was terribed the state of "Charge bayonets on 'em, boys!" cried General McCall, and his aids galloped around with or ders to move onward:

The General, Ord, and his aids, were at the head of his column, and charged in the following order:
The 9th Pennsylvania Reserve Regiment, Col.

Jackson; Kane Ritics, Lieutenant Colonel Kane; and a part of the Sixth Regiment in reserve, with the Tenth and Twelfth Regiments on both

On they went, plunged into the woods, and the rebels fled. They fired as fast as they could load, and in forty-five minutes from the time the rebels opened fire on us they were in full retreat. Down went guns, rifles, overcoats, and everything else that would encounter their running.

The woods presented a fearful spectacle, the dead and dying lying in heaps, and mangled bodies of horses being side by side with their riders. Near the ruins of the battery were seven horses and thirteen men piled up together The groans of dying men and shricks of the wounded were fearful and terrific. Blended with them were the shouts of our victorious soldiers. The men stopped to select some trophies,

General McCall defermined to keep up the retreat and followed the enemy for a mile with parts of the two regiments, including in all Thankful for the liberel patronage bestowe about seventeen hundred men. In the road on our house, we hope by strict attention to and fields were wagon loads of clothes and muskets. The rout of the enemy was total and complete, and was more disastrous and disgraceful to them than any that we have known in the whole war. Two officers were selected to count the dead bodies of the rebels lying in their tracks. The principal portion of the killed were around the position of their battery and in the route of their retreat, they being being shot in the back. One officer counted over a hundred dead bodies. All their wounded who could walk or orun got away, as well as most of their wounded in the early part of the fight.

The distance between the two batteries was about six hundred yards. The Rebels logt nine

NO. 91. horses from their battery. Captain Easton fired, in the very short time during which the engage ment continued, nearly two hundred shell, and unly had thirty-six men to man his guns, not one of whom was lost. His horses stood fire

The Rebel forces consisted of seven compa nies of Stuart's Cavality; Cutt's Battery of four guns; Tenth Alabama, Colonel J. H. Forney; First Kentucky, Colonel Taylor, (killed)—seven hundred—the Sixth South Carolina and one North Carolina Regiment. The South Carolina Regiment has been at a station on the Leesburg Railroad for a day or two. It was them who first opened upon us, and they were the first with as much composure as though they had to run. Two caissons were left in the field, and we, not having horses to bring them in, had to cut them up with axes. The loxes were, however, brought away by Captain Easton, who now has them in camp. We learn from one of the rebel prisoners that the battery was Captain Cutts' Georgia battery, and that they had one sixteenpounder Parrott and three twenty-four pound howitzers. The Kentucky men say that there is much dissatisfaction in their regiment, and declare that they want to go home at the earliest moment. They say that theirs is the only regiment from Kentucky in the army of the Potomac. They left Centreville about three A. M. on Friday morning with the Alabama battery, cavalry, and one other regiment in the rear.

An officer stated that Gen. Johnston had left Centreville with ten thousand men, and come on four miles, where he waited to hear the result. These men were but ten miles off during the cogagement. Eastou's battery was raised about Chambers burg, by Captain Charles Campbell, who was afterwards chosen Colonel, and they deserve great praise for the cool and unflinching manner in which they fired, and for the deadly aim with which each each piece was fired.

This was merely a small expedition of Gen.

McCall's, sent out without the knowledge of Gen. McClellan. When he heard of it, he rode over to Miner's Hill, and got a large force under marching orders. Gen. Hancock's brigade was ordered out. Gen. Meade's brigade left camp at Tennallytown about two p. m. and marched within two miles of the field. when orders came to return. Their confidence now in their leaders; is unbounded; and should General McCall ever lead they will follow without faltering, even though they were walking into their graves. This is the first victory we have won on the Potomac for the rapidity with which it was executed and the completeness of the victory, without any loss of life compared to that of the enemy; and too much praise cannot be accorded to the officers for the management, and men for executing the commands.

If the rebel loss is as great in wounded as it is in dead, it is over four hundred killed and wounded. The proportion is always four or five to one killed, and we know of about a hundred killed. NAMES OF THE KILLED AND WOUNDED.
