BY TELEGRAPH. From our Morning Edition, FROM WASHINGTON. DISPATCHES FROM COM. DUPONT.

Infernal Machines found in the Savannah River. THE REPORTED ARRIVAL OF ARMS AT NEW ORLEANS INCORRECT. THE CASE OF MARSHAL LAMON. THE NEW NAVAL BILL. WASHINGTON, Feb. 23.

Dispatches have been received at the Navy Department from Commodore Dupont, dated Fort Royal, February 18th, enclosing a report from Commander Rogers, in which he says, while sounding in the Savannah river, at a short distance above the mouth of Wright river, he discovered several objects floating upon the surface, which appeared at first sight to be empty tin cans, and as such were not regarded by him as worthy of notice.

The wires were then cut, and the outer buoy was brought off in one of the expedition boats. In consequence of the delicate nature of the exploding apparatus, the result of the examination of the buoy brought on board, it was deemed more prudent to endeavor to sink the remaining buoys rather than attempt to move them, so that the enemy should not have the satisfaction of feeling that a single life had been lost by the diabolical invention.

FROM TENNESSEE. CAPTURE OF CLARKSVILLE. OFFICIAL REPORT OF COMMODORE FOOTE. CLARKSVILLE, TENN., Feb. 20, 1862. To the Hon. Gideon Wells, Secretary of the Navy: We have possession of Clarksville. The citizens being alarmed, two-thirds of them have fled, and having expressed my views and intentions to the mayor and Hon. Cave Johnson, at their request I have issued a proclamation assuring all peaceably disposed persons that they may with safety resume their business avocations, requiring only the military stores and equipments to be given up, and holding the authorities responsible that this shall be done without reservation.

ARRIVAL OF FORT DONELSON PRISONERS. CHICAGO, Feb. 22d. Four thousand Fort Donelson prisoners have already arrived at Camp Douglas. Two thousand more will arrive to-morrow morning.

Steam Printing Office. Having procured Steam Power Presses, we are prepared to execute JOB AND BOOK PRINTING of every description, cheaper than it can be done at any other establishment in the country.

From the Eighteenth U. S. Infantry. (Correspondence of the Telegraph.) CAMP THOMAS, Ohio, Feb. 19, 1862. Mr. EDITOR:—Some people imagine that those who dwell in camps see little of interest and none of the romantic, that it is as lethargic a life as that of a recluse, or as dismal as that of a swamp angel. This may be true of some camps, but of this one it is not. Here we are as comfortable as a brood of pot chickens, and partake of our frugal meals with as much grace and ease as if feasting at the sumptuous banquet of Cleopatra and Mark Antony. We have the pleasure occasionally of putting on our white gloves, tall hats, sable and glossy plumes waving luxuriantly from the side, fine dress coats, brightly polished shoulder scales, and with our glittering rifles parade about our camp, while a bevy of black-eyed lassies gaze on and applaud us as we depart with a coup de grace for our wigwags. Romance is found here in its wildest form. A few days ago a young recruit, enlisted by one of our gallant lieutenants, was brought to camp dressed a la militaire. It was soon discovered that the youthful looking warrior belonged to the feminine gender, and immediately was she marched to head-quarters, where her case was speedily disposed of. She gave a brief narrative of her wanderings to several of the boys, which I have been able to glean the following: When the rebellion broke out, and a call was made by the President for the brave sons of freedom to rally around the old banner for three months, she, I suppose, deeming herself a sun or a brilliant star in some constellation, immediately enlisted. She was in three battles, and for a brief period drove a team. It is said she endured the long journey and the hardships of camp life with the fortitude and courage of an old veteran. She became so deeply enamored with the life of a soldier, that she concluded to join the gallant regulars for three years; hoping, I have no doubt, that she would make some bright summer's morn and find herself a (big-a) dear general-ess. Her voice was quite effeminate and although not quite so musical as the lute, I suspected her sex as soon as I heard her speak. Her hands were not like twin lilies, nor her locks as long and silky as those of "Venice"; the former had lost their alabaster tint, and were now as dark as young bay mare's in summer, and the latter was cropped off close to the head. A witty captain at my elbow remarked to me, before I was certain of the young soldier's sex, "Would you not like to have this boy for your cook?" I replied, "Certainly would I." She heard the remark and the answer, dropped her head, and endeavored to blush gracefully, but the rosy tint refused to steal through the nut brown of her cheek, or tinge the gipsy hue of her forehead. She stated that her parents were dead, and her friends few and far away; she therefore concluded to enter the army, and serve her country, rather than beg. Her story was found to be true, and our good Colonel immediately provided for her wants. On Saturday morning of the 15th, a whispered rumor was current in camp that the battalion was soon to depart, which proved itself true before evening. There was not that bustle, confusion and disorder in the preparation for departure that I have observed in volunteer camps, everything was prepared and arranged with a speed and accuracy I have never before seen. New shoes and other articles of clothing were immediately furnished all those needing them, and the battalion furnished with blank cartridge, and practiced in the loadings and firing. On Sunday afternoon the battalion in dress suit, was drawn up in line of battle by Colonel Carrington, who spoke to them as kindly as a father, yet firmly, as a true soldier. He concluded by saying, as he pointed with his glittering sword to the top of the towering flag-staff on his right, "To you glorious emblem of liberty, the banner of freedom, the proud flag of our loved country, that shall soon wave triumphantly in the breeze of the sunny south, we will raise a salute." The men done exceedingly well, all fitting together with the accuracy of old warriors. You may expect to hear of the Third Battalion of the Eighteenth United States Infantry doing severe damage among the rebels with that terrible rifle before long. On Monday morning, the 17th inst., long before the orient was flushed by the appearance of old Sol, the troops were all at work, and before seven o'clock the funnel-shaped Sibley tents that dotted the hill side so neatly at early morn and the lively and joking troops, (with the exception of company C,) had departed. There was four companies of the Third Battalion, Eighteenth U. S. Infantry, and two companies of the Sixteenth, all regulars, armed "cap-a-pie" and in command of Major Will. A. Stokes as they marched to Columbus, three miles distant, where they took the cars for Cincinnati. On Tuesday eve they expected to be some distance south of Louisville, Ky., and by the last of the week for forced march they will join General Thomas, and participate in the soon expected battle. Captain Eyster's company (C) is still in camp anxiously awaiting his arrival with a few Harrisburg braves to complete the company, when they will join the command of Major Stokes, who desires their presence as speedily as possible, knowing I suppose, that when we depart we will be accompanied by an excellent officer, Captain E., and closely followed by our skillful and assiduous Colonel. In my next letter to the TELEGRAPH, which will be from Tennessee or Alabama, I hope and expect to give you a graphic sketch of the heroic deeds performed by the glorious Eighteenth. ATHLETIC. GEN. BUCKNER IN THE HANDS OF THE U. S. MARSHAL. CALHO, Ill, Feb. 22. Gen. Buckner has been delivered to the U. S. Marshal, on the warrant issued by Justice Catron. He will be taken to Kentucky and tried for treason. ARRIVAL OF FORT DONELSON PRISONERS. CHICAGO, Feb. 22d. Four thousand Fort Donelson prisoners have already arrived at Camp Douglas. Two thousand more will arrive to-morrow morning. THE TWENTY-SECOND AT CLEVELAND. CLEVELAND, Feb. 22. To-day generally was observed as a holiday. To-night the city is finely illuminated, streets thronged, and people exchanging congratulations.
