It is true he is a scion of the house of Orleans, and Napoleon might object to nourishing such a Royal viper ; but has he not ecently been granting all kinds of amnestics to all kinds of people, and may he not think it a masterly stroke of policy to "conquer the affections" of the Bourbons by throwing them a sop in the shape of a bankrupt kingdom. A few verdant people may look upon this farming out of Powers and Principalities-this trading in the happiness of peoples and thrusting obnoxious rulers upon them—as a slight abuse of the prerogatives of "guardianship"; but the Great Powers are only following timehonored precedents.
