A young man belonging to one of the Tennesse regiments—he held the rank of first lieutenant in his company-was very dangerously wounded in Saturday morning's strife, and was not expected to live when I left Dover, mors.

The going man told me he was a native of Harrisburg, Princylvania, and had resided here until the autumn of 1859, when he went woman of culture and fortune, a distant relative. I understand of Gen Pillow, and was soon engaged to marry her. The love stream until the fall of Sumter and the secession of Tennessee, when the affianced husband, strong advocate for the Union, returned home designing to wed after the troubles were over. The betrothed pair corresponded regularly; but some weeks after the lover had gone to Harrisburg, the girl, who had suddenly grown violent secessionist, informed him that she would not become his wife unless he would en list in the rebel service and fight for the inde and in the absorbing selfishness of passion, the informed his parents of his intention to win his mistress on the tented field. In vain they ndeavored to dissuade him from his resolution He went to Tennessee raised a company, re-ceived the congratulations of his traitorous friends, and the copious caresses of his charming tempter.
Last December the Lieutenant proceeded to

THE UNION AND CONSTITUTION OUR GOVERNMENT: dn explanatory statement of the system of government of the country, presenting a view of the government of the United States, and of those of the several States." By M. M. KINNWY. of those of the several States." By M. M'KINNEY. At the present-juncture a particlic mentioner, whiched on a knowledge of our civil institutions, should be specially cuttivated, as the chief element of nationality. It can be operative and abiding for useful purposes, only as induced by an intelligent approbation of the nature and principles of our government. Fuch intelligence, familiar and general among all classes of the people, is essential to the permanence and prosperity of the government. This is requisite e-pecially now, from the extraordinary events of the time, and the vastly important questions of the United States, and of those of the soveral States, as determined by judicial authority and settled practice, or derived from sandard writers. It is a fact, that the views of constitutional aw thus presented on some subjects of the greatest importance, which formerly and at the time of the first publication of the book were discussed with much difference of 01 mion, have become recognized as settled dourlines, to be acted on in reference to the highest interests of the nation in this most eventful period.
