CHURCH ERECTION.—The Wesleyan Union congregation, (colored,) are making arrangements to build a new house of worship on the site of the one in which they are now worshipping, situated on the corner of South street and Tanner's alley. This society was organized in 1828, and for some years worshipped in an old log building on the corner of Third and Mulberry streets. Its present house was built in 1838, and has become so dilapidated that the lives of the congregation are greatly endangered by its liability to fall at any time. The defect being mainly in the foundation, it could not be repaired without taking down the building. It has, therefore, been concluded to remove it, and erect one which will meet the rather "rough" looking; but we have reason wants of the growing congregation. A building committee has already been appointed, the plan drafted, materials contracted for, and all the preparatory arrangements are being energetically pushed forward, as it has been determined to move off the old building early in next gislature, and having been signed by the month. > ESCAPE FROM THE REBELS .- Mr. R. C. Strong, native of Mansfield, Ohio, arrived here this morning on his way westward. Previous to the breaking out of the rebellion, Mr. Strong was carrying on the silver-smith business in Winchester, Va., which he continued up to about eight months since, when known to be of northern birth, he was given the alternative of enlisting in the rebel army or going to prison at Richmond. He choose the former, and was accordingly enrolled in a regiment belonging to Jackson's command, in which he served until the battle near Winchester, when he, in company with about thirty other Union men, succeeded in making their escape to the lines of the Union forces. Mr. Strong still wears the uniform of the rebel army, which, of course, is to believe it covers a brave heart, whose every pulsation beats in sympathy for the cause of our glorious Union.

A. G. CÜRTIN. THE FUTURE OF HARRISBURG .- It is the general remark by strangers, that the beauty of location, grandeur of scenery, and natural advantages of Harrisburg, for a future large city is unsurpassed, with the location of the National Foundry in view, the three or four hundred houses going up this summer, and the healthy condition of things generally, we should feel proud that the ancient borough has thrown off her Rip Van Winkle slumber, and awakened her to her own interests. Let us emulate one another in building up her future greatness, by patronizing home business and especially the URICK & BOWMAN.

[From our Morning Edition.] EXCITEMENT AT THE DEPOT. -Arrival of Parson Brownlow-His Speech .- Parson Brownlow, the distinguished patriot of Teunessee, arrived here at 5.40 o'clock yesterday afternoon, by the count of sickness. The 51st Pennsylvania has Pennsylvania railroad cars direct from Pitts-The notice in last evening's TELEGRAPH, of the expected arrival of the Parson, served to draw to the depot a large crowd of our citizens, who were anxious to behold and pay their respects to a man who has been subjected to numerous and unparalleled atrocities by the rebels, for no other cause than expressing his love for and devotion to the good old union of cts. to 87 cts., all wool; monkey jackets, 50

The arrival of the train bearing the Parson was greeted with loud acclaim by the multitude, and upon its stoppage inside of the depot, the rush and pressure of the crowd was tremendous.

Loud cries were made for the Parson, when he shortly appeared on the platform of the rear in Clarke's Valley, this county, was drowned a car, in company with his excellency, Governor Curtin, and Hon. Henry D. Moore, State Trea-

His appearance was greeted by loud cheers. after which he was introduced to the crowd by Governor Curtin.

The parson then proceeded to address the multitude, remarking that when Gov. Curtin introduced him as Parson Brownlow, he should have said that he was what is left of Parson Brownlow. He attributed his appearance to the fact that he was almost worn out with fatigue incident to long travel, and the exciting scenes he had recently gone through.

He proceeded to speak of the state of affairs in Tennessee, in the course of which he remarked that the blockade was doing the rebels more harm than all the powder and balls of the loyal army. They were without hats, shoes, coats and many of the most common necessaries of life; and notwithstanding they claimed that Cotton was King, they were without calico.

Among thirty or forty stores in Knoxville, they couldn't find such a thing as a fine tooth comb. The consequence of this was, that all the little rebels had their heads full of squatter sovereigns, who were running about to find their rights on the territories of the cranium.

The parson next spoke of some of the scenes he had witnessed in Tennessee, while in jail.--He had seen men taken out and hanged in pairs for no other crime than being friends of the Union. He had seen others taken out, stripped and tied to trees, and their backs literally cut to pieces for the same cause.

The secessionists had robbed him of his press and he had come to this part of the country to purchase another, after which he would go back and pour hot shot into the secession camps. He preferred to go back mounted on a horse with a good sword, and Gen. Fremont by his side, that he might point out the trees where good Union men were hanged and whipped, in order to pay the secessionists back in their own

If Gov. Johnson would give them a good old-fashioned election, after the secession bavonets were driven from east Tennessee, that State would vote herself back into the Union by 50,000 majority. At the recent election in Knoxville for Mayor the lines were fairly drawn between the Jeff Davis candidate and the Lincoln candidate, and the secessionists were whipped more than two to one, notwithstanding the presence of secession bayonets.

In expressing his love for the Union, he said that he was willing to let all other institutions go to the d-l, if necessary, in order to save the Union.

The Parson, in conclusion, paid a high compliment to the Governor and State of Pennsylvania, for their noble efforts to maintain the integrity of the Union.

During the delivery of his brief address the Parson was frequently interrupted by loud shouts of applause; and after he had concluded he was personally introduced by the Governor to a large number of citizens who eagerly pressed forward for this purpose.

Several minutes were spent in thus receiving the civilities of the crowd: when in company with Gov. Curtin, he repaired to the depot restaurant, where he hastily partook of some slight refreshments, after which he resumed his seat in the car, and the hour of departure having arrived, the train moved off eastward amid the parting cheers of the assembled multitude.

The Parson wore a black cloth coat, a figured silk vest, dark gray pantaloons, and an oldfashioned hat, bound with crape. His garments were in the highest degree thrifty, according with the plain, simple character of the man, and utterly devoid of display or appearance. He looked, indeed, a quiet Methodist preacher, and bore no external evidences of the adventurous and exciting life which he has led for upwards of half a century.

There was abundant testimony, however, in his faded, hollow face, the figure a little bowed, and the hard, emaciated hand, of the trials-approaching martyrdom-to which he had been recently subjected. Indeed, he stated that whereas, at the prriod of his incarceration in the Knoxville jail, he weighed 175 pounds, he had been reduced, by the time of the receipt of his discharge, to 130 pounds. The long and parching fever which assailed him in February last is still evinced in the lustreless expression of his eyes, which are yet, however, so subject to his fiery spirit that they flash as of old when some bitter recollection stirs him to indignation. He seems to have sworn never to forgive the enemies of Tennessee, but to follow them steadily, through war and peace, until his wrongs and the murder of his friends is accounted and atoned for...

He was accompanied, we believe, by one of his sons, who succeeded in making his escape from the rebels, some time after his father. The parson's wife and several children are still in the hands of the rebels, who, it is understood, hold them as hostages for his good conduct. It is said that under these circumstances the Parson, upon bidding adieu to his wife told her to make up her mind to be hanged, as he would certainly fight against the rebels as long as he had breath in him.

The Parson proceeded from this city direct to Philadelphia, where extensive arrangements were made to give him a proper reception.

A stated meeting of the Hope Fire Company will be held this (Friday) evening at 7 o'clock Punctual attendance is requested.
