CRRESPONDENTS .- The Atlantic Monthly Easthe following excellent: advice to news-Paper correspondents: "Do not despise any lonest propitiation, however small, in dealing With your editor. Look to the physical aspect Pofe, whose chaotic manuscript of the 'Iliad,' written on the backs of old letters, still remans in the British Museum. If your doouheat is slovenly, the presumption is that its lerary execution is the same, Pope to the contrary notwithstanding. An editor's eye becomes carnal, and is easily attracted by a come-Toutside. If you really wish to obtain his food will for your production, do not first tax from New York; I now have on hand, and I fould begin by asking him to pay for the hire of the carriage which takes you to his door.
