ELIXIR PROPYLAMINE, THE NEW REMEDY FOR RHEUMATISM. A NEW REMEDY, A CERTAIN REMEDY, FOR ACUTE RHEUMATISM, CHRONIC RHEUMATISM, GOUT, GRAVEL, NEURALGIA, SCIATICA, MIGRAINE, HEADACHE, BRUISES, SWELLINGS, HOW LONG STANDING, WILL CONQUER IT, WILL CURE IT.

PENNSYLVANIA HOSPITAL.

FROM OFFICIAL HOSPITAL REPORTS. MAY 10, 1860.—Ellen S., et. 25, single, never was very strong, two years ago she had an attack of acute rheumatism, from which she was confined to her bed for two weeks and subsequently from a relapse for six weeks. She has been well since then till last Saturday, while engaged in house cleaning, she took cold, had pain in her back, felt cold, but had no decided chill. Two days later her right knee swelled, which was followed by swelling of the knee joint and of the hands. She has now dull pain in her shoulders, and her knuckles are very tender, red and painful; both hands are affected, and several physicians have attended to her case. This, then, is a case of acute rheumatism, or, as it is now fashionably called, rheumatic fever. It is a well remarked typical case. We will carefully watch the case, and from time to time call your attention to the various symptoms which present themselves. My chief object in bringing her before you now, is to call attention to a remedy which has recently been recommended in the treatment of rheumatism. I mean Propylamine. Dr. A. C. Williams, of St. Petersburg, recommends it in the highest terms, having derived great benefit from its use in 200 cases which came under his care. Various commendatory testimonials respecting it have appeared in our journals, and I propose therefore to give it another trial. I must confess I am always incredulous as to the worth of new remedies, which are recommended so highly, but this comes to me commended so highly, that we are bound to give it a trial.

SAME CASE FOUR DAYS LATER!

MAY 23, 1860.—I will now exhibit to you the patient for whom I prescribed Propylamine, and was then laboring under an attack of acute rheumatism. She is now steadily taking it in doses of three grains every two hours (intermitting it at night). The day after you saw her, I had her much more comfortable, and she was able to get up for a week or more, judging from her other attacks. (The patient now walked into the room.) The improvement has steadily progressed, and you cannot fail to notice a marked change in her appearance. Her joints, which were so nearly all of their natural size. This for our experiment would have seemed very successful; but, gentlemen, we must wait a little while before we give a decided opinion as to what is to be the result.

Here is another patient who was placed on the use of the same medicine on Sunday last. She is now suffering from a chronic rheumatism, and I found her at that time with an acute attack supervening upon her chronic affection. The wrists and knuckles were much swollen and so on. She took the medicine of Propylamine in three grain doses every two hours, and you will perceive that the swelling of the joints has much diminished.

THREE DAYS LATER!!

MAY 26, 1860.—This is the case of acute rheumatism treated with propylamine, the first of those to which I called your attention at our last clinic. She is still very comfortable, and is now taking three grains three times daily. In this case it was commenced by her physician, and he called at our last lecture, to which you attended to do. I will now bring before you your characteristic case of acute rheumatism, and the result to be mentioned. I think, as good fortune, we shall justly render our verdict in favor of propylamine. He is a man, and he has been admitted a few days ago. He has had occasional rheumatic pains, but not so as to keep his bed, until eight days ago. The pains began in his right knee, subsequently affected the left knee, and later, the joints of the upper extremities. These joints are all swollen, tense and tender. His tongue is furzed; his skin, at present dry, though there has been much sweating. His pulse is full and strong, and about 90. He has now used propylamine for two or four hours. This gentleman is what may be called a typical case of acute rheumatism. There was exposure to cold and wet, and the exposure was followed by a feeling of coldness, severe articular pain, beginning, as it usually does, in the lower joints. There is fever and the profuse sweating, so generally attendant on acute rheumatism. I did not bring this patient before you with the intention of giving you a lecture on all the points connected with rheumatism, but to again give a trial to the new remedy we are testing, and to exhibit to you this typical case, as I have called it, in which there could not be a fair opportunity for testing the medicine in question. We are, therefore, avoiding the use of all other medicines, even aspirin, and the result to be mentioned as to which was the efficient remedy. You shall see the case of a future clinic.

THE RESULT.

A FAVORABLE VERDICT. JUNE 6, 1860.—The next of our observations is the case of acute rheumatism before you at our clinic of May 26th, which I then called a typical case, and which I was remarking was a fair opportunity for testing the worth of our new remedy. It was therefore, as you are given in three grain doses every two hours for four days. The patient has got along very nicely, and is now able to walk about, as you see. I do not hesitate to say that I have never seen so severe a case of acute rheumatism so soon restored to health as this man has been, and without being prepared to decide positively as to the value of the remedy we are testing, and to exhibit to you this typical case, in which we have tried the Chloride of Propylamine, the patients have regained their health much earlier than under the treatment ordinarily pursued. With this conclusion, you would yourselves try it, and report the results.

For a full report of which the above is a condensed extract, see the Philadelphia Medical and Surgical Reporter. It is the report after a fair trial by the best medical authority in this country, and makes it unnecessary to give numerous certificates from astonished doctors and rejoicing patients.

A SPEEDY CURE, AN EFFECTUAL CURE, THE SAME RESULT. IN EVERY CASE, WHENEVER TRIED, WHENEVER TRIED, IT WILL DO AGAIN.

Bullock & Crossley, a firm well known to most medical men, by whom the Elixir Propylamine has been introduced, have sold to us the exclusive right to manufacture it according to the original recipe, and we have made arrangements of such magnitude as to enable us to scatter it broadcast amongst suffering humanity.
