OUR PLATFORM THE UNION—THE CONSTITUTION—AND THE ENFORCEMENT OF THE LAW.

HARRISBURG, PA. Tuesday Afternoon, May 20, 1862.

THE WOUNDED SOLDIERS IN ST. JOSEPH'S HOSPITAL.

We publish the official report of Surgeon General Smith, this afternoon, giving a detailed account of the operations of his department in connection with the sick and wounded Pennsylvania soldiers in General McClellan's Army of the Potomac.

By its sacrifices the Republican party has saved this Union. One year ago, Abraham Lincoln, although elected to the Presidency by the vote and the voices of the Republican masses of the country, solemnly rejected all claims to official recognition which were urged on purely political grounds.

There is hope and glory in such a record as these facts present. They teach a lesson worthy still farther and higher emulation. If such sacrifices saved the Union, how much more can the Republican party sacrifice to perpetuate that Union!

WE ARE WILLING to wager a small amount that the author of the communication to the Patriot, this morning, who evinces such indignation at our reference to the late Charles J. Ingersoll, is a semi-secessionist.

It is reported from Fredericksburg, Virginia, that the merchants of that place, who are largely indebted to Northern houses, are selling off their real estate and personal property, with the avowed intention of defrauding their creditors.

PROCLAMATION BY THE PRESIDENT.

If any man ever doubted that Abraham Lincoln was President of the United States, in fact as well as in form, such a doubt must by this time have been entirely removed.

In repudiating the supposed order of General Hunter (as its genuineness is not recognized by his proclamation) President Lincoln entrenches himself in his position of extending pecuniary aid to such of the states as desire to emancipate their slaves.

While we are in favor of the confiscation of all rebel property, we are also as honestly opposed to any proceedings for that purpose, which are unconstitutional and illegal.

STOCK JOBBERS are a class of men little known beyond the circle of their own associations in the large cities, yet wielding, by some means, an immense influence on the destinies of the country, in its business and financial relations.

THE ATTACK ON FORT DARLING. A private letter from an officer on one of the vessels of Commodore Rogers' flotilla, speaking of the recent engagement, says:

THE GALENA, Iron clad, was admirably maneuvered, and so beautifully saucy that she passed five or six times as close as she could get and silenced one of our batteries.

FROM BALTIMORE. Arrival of Sick and Wounded Soldiers. BALTIMORE, May 20. The steamer State of Maine, with 461 sick soldiers, mostly convalescent and able to travel, arrived here this morning.

FROM FORTRESS MONROE. ANOTHER GUN FOR THE STEAMER NAUGATUCK. BALTIMORE, May 20. The Old Point boat has arrived, but she brings no letter from Fortress Monroe or Norfolk.

IT IS CURRENTLY reported and credited in military circles that 2,900 rebel cavalry attached to the different commands have been disbanded and formed into Guerrilla bands, occupying the various mountain ranges and fastnesses.

TERRIBLE HAVOC AMONG THE REBELS.

FORTRESS MONROE, May 19—P. M.

The Stevens battery, known as the Naugatuck, has just arrived here from the scene of operations in front of Richmond.

It seems that our iron-clad sloop-of-war Galena proceeded up the river, leading the fleet, and silencing the many minor batteries that lined the shore.

At first, the shot of the rebel guns rolled off the sides of the Galena, making only dents in her mail, but gradually, after five hours' fighting, it was found that the steel-pointed balls used by the rebels were piercing her.

Thirty shots struck her and lodged, whilst two went entirely through her, tumbling out on the other side.

A flaw was discovered in the metal, and this was, no doubt, the cause of the explosion. Lieutenant Morris, in command of the gunboat Fort Royal, and late of the Cumberland, was slightly wounded.

Commodore Rodgers was wounded painfully, but not seriously, in the left cheek. These are all the casualties heard of up to the sailing of the Naugatuck for Fortress Monroe.

The slaughter among the rebels in the batteries is said to have been terrible, although they had the advantage of our gunboats in having the batteries situated on a bluff.

The fight will be renewed shortly, when Commodore Rodgers hopes to silence the rebel forts, and if he can pass the obstructions known to be placed in the river above the batteries, he will take the city.

A mortar boat was greatly needed during the action, as with it the batteries could have been taken quickly and easily.

SECRETARIES Welles and Seward took a trip up the James river yesterday, on the steamer Baltimore, as far as James town, accompanied by Commodore Goldsborough and Capt. Dahlgren.

SENATOR Lane, of Indiana, Hon. Joseph Segar and several other Congressmen and distinguished gentlemen from Washington, accompanied by a few ladies, arrived this morning, and paid a visit to Norfolk and Portsmouth.

THE GALENA, Iron clad, was admirably maneuvered, and so beautifully saucy that she passed five or six times as close as she could get and silenced one of our batteries.

A Brave Woman Kills a Scoundrel.

[From the Davenport (Iowa) Gazette, May 13.]

Private letters received in this give the particulars of an affair which recently happened at Cape Girardeau in which a lady of this city bore an active part.

Mrs. Kendrick, wife of Capt. Frank Kendrick, of the Second Iowa cavalry, had been staying at a hotel in that village for some time when she was aroused one night by a man at her room door, who demanded admittance, which was of course refused.

She persisted, she called for help. He then fled, but came the second time, when she again raised the alarm, and he ran off. The landlady of the hotel then gave Mrs. Kendrick a pistol, and advised her to use it, in case the scoundrel came again.

He did so, and she then threatened to shoot him if he disturbed her again, when he left.

Two or three nights after she was again awakened by the rapping at her room door, and opened it and asked him what he wanted, and if he remembered what she told him.

He replied that he wanted to come in and see her, and guessed she would not hurt anybody with an empty pistol, and then he tried to push her back into her room, so as to enter and close the door.

Raising her pistol, she fired, the ball entering the neck near the jugular vein, and he fell dead on the spot.

He proved to be a prominent citizen of the town, a wealthy man, and a leading secessionist. When the news became known about town, a crowd of his fellow secessionists mobbed the house and threatened to hang Mrs. Kendrick, and it is not improbable they would have tried to carry their designs if a guard had not been placed around the house by the commander of the federal forces at the Cape.

Mrs. Kendrick promptly made known what she had done, and went before a magistrate, who, after an examination, gave her a certificate of honorable discharge; it is also said that the wife of the deceased, who leaves a large family, expressed her approval, under the circumstances, of what Mrs. Kendrick had done.

The citizens also presented her with a pair of elegant pistols, as a mark of favor. Mrs. Kendrick shortly after joined her husband in the army on the Upper Tennessee.

In this act, melancholy as is the fact that any man should thus bring down upon himself such punishment, Mrs. Kendrick exhibited a determined heroism, combined with true womanly dignity, that does her much honor.

Her act will be applauded wherever it is known; and were there a few more examples of this kind, there would be far less libertines in the world.
