THE CUT WORM .- Many of our farmers complain of the partial destruction of their corn by the cut worm. They say that the worm is more active this year than usual, and that, in many instances, they have had to transplant nearly their whole crop. An intelligent farmer, whose success in agriculture is well known, communicated the fact, a few weeks ago, that he had found a remedy to destroy the cut worm, which was simply a free application of salt to the corn at the time of planting. Perhaps those who complain did not try this method. If salt will not dissolve the destructive animals. it is hard to tell what will. We hope this will the worms themselves.
