HARRISBURG, PA Saturday Morning, June 21, 1862.

A GENERAL EXCHANGE OF PRISONERS IS about to be made, and it is believed that the arrangements are partly arranged for that purpose. The country will rejoice at this fact. It will revive were suffering in the loathsome prisons of the south, alike the prey of disease and the object of southern malevolence and brutality. Nine out of every ten prisoners held by the federal government, provided they re-enter the traitor army after they have been exchanged (in the event of no parole being exacted) will do so under different fee ings from those which prompted them first to take up arms against the government. They will be impressed with different ideas of national strength and northern power. The section of country which the southern people have been taught to despise, will be represented to the traitor army, on the return of these rebel prisoners, in its true aspects, not alone for its boundless resources, but for the unconqurable devotion with which the people of the north cling to the government of the Union. While this must be the representation of the rebel prisoners, the story of our own soldiers, with the memory of all their suffering and the marks of persecution still clinging to them all, may have a tendency to change the sympathies of those in the north who have been persisting in their claims of generosity and manhood for those who are leading in the rements to the struggle to put down treason.-His voice will go to swell the general indiguaand capacity of the rebel prisoners who have

AN UNJUSTIFIABLE DISTINCTION.

Several of our most respectable and intelligent friends from the rural districts, who have lately been in the city with a number of the citizens of Harrisburg, called on us this morning and requested us to protest, in their name, against the distinction made in the manner of admitting visitors to Camp Curtin by the guard in charge of the main entrances. These gentlemen allege that they applied for admission in a respectful and courteous manner, but sion in a respectful and courteous manner, but off the rebel Jackson. It was a distance of they were refused in a stern and rude style, fifty-six miles, and rained every day during the unbecoming alike the soldier or the gentleman; and that while they were thus abruptly debarred from entering the camp grounds, others their passage through the guard. The complaint acems to be against one Lieut. Roads, vho is reported to have lately made himself peculiarly obnoxious by his ungentlemanly the booming of cannon. On making a charge treatment of visitors, while at the same time he suffered others to pass who approached the the dreadful fact that some of its loved ones gate with something of the rudeness with which he displayed to those making a courteous application for a imission.

It is not necessary to refuse any man admittance to the camp, as long as the visit is designed merely to gratify a harmless cariosity. Lieut. Roads should remember that the men whom he refuses admittance to the camp, are the people who pay him his wages, and that they have some little right to behold the rebel traitors who are putting them to so much expense. Either reject all who have no passes or admit the public wishout the formality of a pass. In moment's notice to repeat the labor if needs the meantime, to save our friends trouble, who come from distant parts of the county or the State, to visit Camp Curtin for the purpose of to procure passes of Captain Dodge, the commander of the Camp.

CAMP AT WRAVERSVILLE,

FAURQUIER COUNTY, VA., June 16, 1862. Mr. EDITOR: I have concluded to trespass upon your valuable columns, to inf rm our friends what the 197th is doing down on the "Sacred Soil." On the 28th of May, at the time of General Banks' retreat, it was our division, (Gen McDowell's,) that left Manassas Junction and marched to Front Royal and cut march, and when night-fall arrived we bivou-ached under trees or bushes. At Peidmont we halted and received a two days' rations in our have reacks and on we went through the mounwere admitted, simply because they elbowed tains, and on Sabbath morning, June 1st, our brigade (Gen. Shields' artil lery had a very heavy skirmish with the re-resenting portion of Jackson's army. The 107th is on the right of our brigade, and the men ac-quitted themselves with great credit to them-selves and the great State that they represent. As several members of my company (C) have parents and relatives residing in Harrisburg and Dauphin county, I deem it proper to give you this short entitle for publication for their benefit. Our brigade lays again in Eastern Virginia near Cattlet's station on the Orange and Alex andria railroad. Evacuation of Cumberland Gap.

WASHINGTON, June 19. The Secretary of War received to-day a despatch from Gen. Geo. W. Morgan, dated Camp near Cumberland Gap, June 18th 8 o'clock, A.

M. It states that his army commenced its march at lo'clock on that morning to attack the evemy at Cumberland Gap, but on their arrival they found that he had evacuated that very important position, his rear guard having left only about four hours before the arrival of our advance.

Gen. Morgan praises the conduct of his Division and its arduous march through an ex-tremely difficult country. He says that his cannon were dragged up the precipitous sides of the Pine and Cumberland Mountains by the aid of black and tackle; two hundred men being employed upon the ropes of a single piece. In his progress considerable skirmishing with the enemy had taken place but without any loss on our side. General Morgan highly compliments Gener
