WEXIER HOUSE, June 28.

The events transpiring at this point, and in the army before Richmond during the past four days, have been of such varied character and thrilling interest, that I scarcely know where to commence or end the record in order to make it at all understandable to the general reader.

Many who were eye witnesses to these movements have fled panic-stricken, fully convinced that the whole army before Richmond had been destroyed, and that General McClellan has been out-witted, out-generaled, out-flanked and "driven to the wall," where he promised to place the enemy.

The evacuation of White House was a most inexplicable mystery under any other condition of facts; but had they kept their eyes open in the early part of the week, they would have discovered that the work of evacuation was silently and surely progressing before any of the fighting on the right wing, as early as Tuesday, and that large numbers of vessels had left the York and Pamunkey rivers and were moving rapidly around a new base of operations on the James river.

At dusk a new panic was occasioned by the discovery that all the large masses of subsistence stores on the landings, indicating the probability that it might become necessary during the night to apply the torch to them to prevent their falling into the hands of the enemy.

Whether this movement is good or bad, or what may be intended by General McClellan to be accomplished by it, further than throwing his left on to the James river, and supporting Fort Darling, it is impossible to present to say a day or an hour may decide this point.

At the White House, on Wednesday, matters were progressing as usual, with the exception, that there had been a creek in the leading of stores of all descriptions, whilst these on the landings were being rapidly loaded in wagons and moved off towards the left flank.

On the same day General Casey came down and took command of the small land force, not exceeding 600 men, and in the evening was notified to prepare at any moment for the entire evacuation of the post, and the preservation, as far as practicable, of the public property.

The down train of cars due at 7 o'clock on Wednesday evening had not arrived, which added to the excitement among the sutlers and camp followers.

were nearly all of Gen. Hooker's division, and had participated in the gallant advance on the left of the centre on Wednesday morning, driving the enemy from their rifle pits and reporting that they had secured and held what is known as Tavern Hill, an important position, commanding the city of Richmond.

notice to apply the torch for their destruction, if it should become necessary. There was also great commotion among the crowds of contrabands, who have been found most efficient laborers, and who have been to great advantage in the commissary and munition departments.

of the New York Tenth, Colonel Benedit, and two other regiments, under command of Colonel Warren, acting Brigadier General, and the entire force of regulars under Major General Sykes. This fresh force held the enemy in check whilst the force which had previously been the blunt of the battle, moved steadily back in good order, carrying with them their wounded and dead.

on Saturday evening, and though he found neither bread for man, or hay for beasts, was welcomed with heavy showers of grape shot from the three gunboats, which were ranged along in front of the landing. They were supposed to be thirty thousand men, and unless they brought their haversacks well supplied, must have gone supperless to bed. In the best of times I found starvation to stare me in the face at White House, and I hope the rebels found no better fare.
