Encounaging Signs, -We are glad to see al most everywhere signs that the nation is arousing from the inactivity and despondency which followed the recent battles before Richmond. A brief reflection, says a cotemporary, showed every man that no time was to be lost wise, patriotic action was imperatively needed It was seen that without this our peril was imminent, that with this we had everything to hope. It was manifest that the rebels had by conscription brought their army up to the highest point possible, and never again could they make any more formidable demonstration than they had. It was equally manifest that we had by no means exhausted our resources, either in money or men. The simple question remaining was, shall we use them? To this it would seem there could be but one answer. And there is but one. Thank Heaven! that answer the nation is beginning to give. The money must be furnished, the men must be furnished. So say the people, from Maine to the Pacific, and so it shall be. Does any one suppose that if we show the same earnestness and self-denial which the rebels have shown that there can be a particle of doubt about the waive our ordinary business for the time, and concentrate all our energies upon this work, suppose we wage war with all the earnestness of real warfare, does any rational man believe that the result can be in the least doubtful? And does any man who understands the aims and the character of the rebel leaders think for selfish motives, we can afford to allow them to Pig Lead, conquor? It is a question not alone of suppressing rebellion, but of preserving our own peace and independence and self-respect in the future This the people are beginning to understand, as they should. They have met every demand the government has made on them, and met it cheerfully and bravely. They will meet every future demand. They will never allow this fair heritage to be blighted by the triumph of the accursed rebellion. They will remain faithful to the end, and Heaven will crown their fidelity and patriotism with success. Let every man of us move at once and do what in him lies to speed the happy day of triumph. Now is the hour to show whether we are worthy of the gifts, God has bestowed upon us, or whether "wanting!" must be written against our names after we have been weighed in the scales in which Heaven has now placed us. ಿಟ್ಟರೆ A MODEL ESTABLISHMENT.—Among the many mprovements lately made in our city, to which we can point with pride as an evidence of prosperity and as a determination on the part of our business men, no longer, to remain behind the "light house," is the completion of Eby & Kunkle's large brick building at the corner of Market and Fifth streats, which is alike creditable to the owners and ornamental to that
