Let us number them among the early victims of this with secret northern sympathizers. It endeavors to show that the border state men, who have refused to accept the patriotic offers of the President, were actuated by noble motives, but it neglects to inform its readers that the men who thus contemptuously treated the proffers of the President are now on the stump in the border states making the issues that slavery is of more importance than the Union, and that sooner than defend that Union when such a defence imperils slavery, these very men, the Wickliffes and Davises, have openly declared their in oution of taking up arms against the government and the Union that slavery may be the subject of distation, selecting a particular sustained and perpetuated.

OUR FRIENDS IN BELLEFONTE were doubtless as much amused as we were ourselves, on reading the bitterness with which the Denoeratic Wutchman, in its last issue, assails the pro prietor of the TELIGRAPH. This surprise, on our part, is increased by the fact that neither of the young gentlemen (?) whose names appear as the ostensible editors of that journal, have ever had any business or social intercourse of language alike an insult to patriotism and a with the proprietor and editor of this journal, so that they speak in regard to matters which are basely false, and venture an opinion in respect to one whom, we venture to assert, neither Furey or Meek have ever seen. But what will the democratic friends of Mr. Furey think, when we state that he actually applied for employment as a writer for the columns of the Taxa-QRAPH? Doubtless his failure to get into the confidence of Mr. Bergner has bad much to do with the insolence and slang with which he assails that gentleman, and therefore we contemn, pity and score the man who would thus appeal for the recognition of a gentleman, and make his failure to succeed to that, the motive for unmanly and cowardly assault. If Forey & Mack progress in their present course, they will so in become ornaments of dough-faceism and slander, fit for service in more extensive fields of treason and falsehood, than those afforded amid the vales and fountains of the loyal portion of Centre county. Men who thus utter personal slang, have stomach for that treason which gives an incentive to all their political differences.

We have a right to insist that no man question the motives or criticise the plans of the government to crush rebellion. Those who insist on the liberty of speech to invigh against the government, make that liberty a licentionenes danger to the country. It is the Union that we are now struggling to preserve. It is liberty that we are battling to maintain, against the combined hosts of traitors and the united influence of all the governments of the world In such a fight there must be no mistaking our duty. There must be no hesitation about dealing with our enemies, whether they show themselves on the streets of Harrisburg, are seen skulking in the swamps of the Chickahominy, or are caught on our lines along the James river. We repeat it again, there is no difference in dealing with traitors, wherever they are discovered, and thus to the mournful cry of, "Watchman, what of the night?" we answer: immediate and eternal death to all traitors.

Our soldiers saw the rebels employ the blacks at Stono, to load the cannon, and they think we have as good a right to employ them too. The logic is inevitable with our boys. There will soon be one every loyal city and state in the Union, and it table with our boys. There will soon be one or more black regiments at Hilton Head and Seaufort.
