The crowd of visitors at Camp Curtin, even through the dust and the dirt, and the heat and the haste, seeming at once dangerous and unsurmountable, are immense every usy. The sufferer, the avertisement, are a sufferer, the avertisement, Cut out the advertisement, and send for it at once the lest adjeu, where and send for it at once the set adjeu. surmountable, are immense every day. Wives is a touching sight to note the last adieu, where emotion must be hushed and where the purity of a tear dare not be exhibited. The affection ate greeting is alone in the look, and the silent shake of the hand is the simple way of expressing their eloquence at parting. Here, too, old fathers and mothers linger at the side of their sons, urging the holy word of admonition that The field officers of the above regiment have they may be true to their God, their country not yet been officiall announced. of which marks a fresh vow of devotion as made by both. These are the incidents which the recording angel will pressrve; and it is the memory of these that will stimulate in the true man the noblest ardor and highest valor of the soldier, for without love or fillial affec. tion, the bravery of men soon becomes like the passions of the brute—an impulse without an incentive—a pursuit seeking satisfaction only in blood. Such is Camp Curtin, and such are the thoughts suggested by an hour's casual observation in that locality.
