BRIGADIER GENERAL GRARY .-- A dispatch was received on Wednesday by the wife of Brig.Gen. Geary, who is at present residing in New Cumberland, on the opposite side of the river, three miles below this city, announcing his safe arrival in Washington city, and that he would positively reach home to-day. The same dispatch bore the gratifying intelligence that. although wounded severely in one of the arms, active service. The first telegraphic dispatches; it will be recollected, stated that one of the General's arms had been amputated.

THE BUCKTAILS -A misapprehension exists as to the Bucktail Brigade. The Governor authorizes the raising of Bucktail regiments in precisely the same way as the raising of all other regiments is authorized—Secretary Stanron, however, giving the assurance that the Bucktail regiments, when raised, should be kept together as one brigade.

The wide spread fame of the Bucktails, and their heroism and gallantry in the field, led to the request indicated being made.
