OPERATIONS OF THE REBELS. THE RAID AT CATLETTS. Slaughter of the Rebels by Gen. Ricketts.

WASHINGTON, August 26. Having left Warrenton at an early hour this morning, we bring news from that point of the latest date, although we write from Washington.

The stringent order of General Halleck prohibiting correspondents from remaining in the army, and any officer or soldier from giving or selling them any substance, and directing all guards and patrols to hold all such under arrest, has made it difficult, the last week, to procure any accurate information, and to send it to you, or to live while making the attempt.

WASHINGTON, August 26. Having left Warrenton at an early hour this morning, we bring news from that point of the latest date, although we write from Washington.

Lieut. Keiphart, Quartermaster Carroll's Brigade. C. J. Leonard, Maryland Purcell Legion.

Capt. Golding, Quartermaster with Pope's train, and his Sergeant Major. Lieutenant Winslow, Kansas Rifles.

Lieutenant Moore, Quartermaster Harris Light Cavalry. Lieutenant New Jersey Cavalry.

First Lieutenant Brook, Company B, Purcell Legion, Maryland. Second Lieutenant Hogarth, Company B, Purcell Legion, Maryland.

Colonel Cleary, Second Maine Cavalry. Mr. Sites was General Stuart and General Lee converging after the storm near the road to camp as they were marching off in a hollow square.

Stuart was giving orders about destroying the Railroad bridge. Out half a mile they had a battery of six guns, and in this way, Warrenton was Robinson's brigade of cavalry, making with Lee's brigade, about four thousand. They boasted they had ten thousand.

When they reached Warrenton they were met by the people with open arms; everybody rushed out with food for the rebels, and all had abundant rations supplied from our commissaries; the prisoners got nothing; they left about eight o'clock A. M., in the direction of Warrenton and Sperryville, but Lee's cavalry went off towards Front Royal.

They said that the main body of their army laid at Sperryville, and that Stone wall Jackson had a column moving off to the right. After the Bristle was charged on a second time, Col. Kane and Col. Myers, of Pope's staff, escaped to the rear and succeeded in rallying about sixty of them, and made a charge down towards the station on them, they again charged upon them while they were plundering their wagons and drove them off, and they did not return at that point, the result of these charges is twenty rebels killed and wounded, five dead left on the field, and six horses taken from them, and a number of prisoners released. They took three large eight horse ambulances from one of the trains and loaded them with their wounded.

In all, the rebels lost some forty killed, wounded and prisoners. Col. Kane and two men mortally wounded. Privates J. Koons and Bandin, and five others, wounded. Colonel Kane had out a picket of sixteen men, under Lieut. Winslow, all of whom were taken.

It is to his cool and daring conduct, with that of Col. Myers, that we are indebted for the only check these men received. The rebels are now but a few miles off of Warrenton. We have lost in the series of skirmishes during the last week, about six hundred men. It is impossible to give all their names.

We were refused by officers upon all sides a list of names, and are told it is by order. No letters are allowed to be sent by officers or men; no mails are allowed to be sent by any one under any conditions, so people are not alarmed at not hearing from their relatives. Warrenton was retaken by Gen. McDowell on Saturday night, with a small loss.

The recent rains raised the Rappahannock nearly fifteen feet, but in a few days it can again be forced anywhere. On Saturday morning the rebels attempted to cross in strength at the railroad bridge on the Rappahannock. Gen. Ricketts drew up his artillery and infantry, and open fire upon the rebels with twelve or fifteen pieces of artillery.

Several hours afterwards a second attempt was made by them to cross, when Ricketts' battery opened upon them with terrible effect. It is supposed that at least one thousand or fifteen hundred of the rebels were killed. No attempt was made by the rebels to remove the dead bodies of their soldiers, but again and again they made their charges over the bodies of their fallen comrades, and as repeatedly they fell again to try it. The bridge was destroyed.
