PENNSYLVANIA HOSPITAL. [FROM OFFICIAL HOSPITAL REPORTS.]

MAY 19, 1800,—Eliès S., set. 23, single, never was very circing. Two years ago she had an attack of acute rhours, itsm, from which she was confined to her bed for two weeks and subsequently from a relapse fer four more. She has been well since then till last Satur day, while engaged in hone cleaning, she took cold, had pain in her back, felt cold hot had no decided chill. Two days later her anxies be gan so swell, which was followed by swelling of the knee joints and of the hands. She has now delt jealn in her shoulders, and her knuckles are very tender red and painful; both hands are affected, but the right is most so. This, then, is a case of acute rheumatism, or as it is now fashionably called, rheumatic fever. Her well remarked typical case. We will carefully watch the case, and from time to time call your attention to the various symptoms which present themselves. My chief object in bringing her before you now, is to call attention to remedy which has recently been recommended in the treatment of rheumatism. I mean propylamine. Defined terms, having derived great benefit from its call in 250 cases which came under his care. Various commendatory teatimonials respecting it have appeared in our journals, and I propose therefore to give it another trial. I must confess I am always incredulous as to the worth of new remedies, which are vaunted as specific, but this comes to us recommended so highly, that we are bound to give it a trial.
