Beli-ving that but one sentiment should and did animate all true men, we were content to go on, repeating our defences of the government and the holy work in which it was engaged, by contributing what we could in reason and humble argument, to the success of the general cause. Not so, however, with our opponents. Day after day, the Patriot and Union teemed with the vilest assaults upon the government, It attacked the policy of the President-it denounced the taxes which were about to be levied on the people, in order that national life might be prolonged-it invited resistance to the officers of the lawit sought to destroy the national credit-it bartered for the national dishonor-and it made a profligacy of truth that treason might triumph. Every reading man in Harrisburg must remember how these vile traducers of honest men conducted themselves before the election. The columns of the newspaper which they printed, would convict them of conspiracy against the government in its broadest guise. The sentiments which they uttered were conceived and matured purposely to disgrace the government. The fabrications which they put forth, were concocted expressly to give aid and comfort to rebellion. They denounced the government while it was engaged with all its energies in a life and death struggle with traitors. They ridiculed the President, because he represented the government, and because such ridicule was their only weapon of attack on loval men. All this was done for party ! The country was lost sight of-honor and truth were trampled in the dust, that party might try in this contest. triumph. These men have now got their reward.
