HARRISBURG, PA.

Saturday Afternoon, November 15, 1862.

A WALL FROM CLEARFIELD.

This morning's Patriot contains a letter from that prince of demagogues and political hypocrites, William Bigler, in which two important facts are brought before the public. First, Bigler complacently announces that he is not a candidate for the United States Senate, because the geographical claims of the people of the eastern part of the state transcend those of all other localities. This is of course all both.

ALL PAYS BUT—LABOR.

In looking over the business world, and regarding the enterprises of men with the stupendous plans and purposes of the government, we are often puzzled with a curiosity to know who pays for all these vast undertakings. Of course the mere handling of the money—the transfer of sums of money, rightfully one's own—is not the kind of pay to which we allude.

THE REVOLUTION IN GREECE.

The deposition of King Otho by the revolutionists of Greece, regarded by the New York Evening Post as an event of more significance than appears at the first view. The King has reigned just thirty years, and with his fall the Bavarian dynasty ends. The monarchy which was established for him the Great Powers of Europe he has lost through his own misconduct, and he becomes a member of the large company of fugitive princes, in consequence of the sudden and irresistible uprising of his own people.

After thus keenly gratifying his spite, Mr. Bigler proceeds to enlighten the public on a plan to settle the great issue now made by rebel traitors of his own party with the federal government. When he conceived and brought forth this plan, his knees must have been in a terrible condition, trembling as the leafless branches of the sombre forests of his own dear Clearfield, from which his vision is never directed, unless it be in explorations for office, or an effort for his "southern brethren" such as he makes in his letter to Mr. Anderson. It is a plea for treason in every line, sentence, and paragraph. After suggesting all manner of difficulties—after creating all sorts of obstacles, and pleading the impossibility of conquering the south, the dough-face sneaks out, the miserable trickster and abettor of treason develops himself, when he attempts to force the inference, that the war must be ended by compromise, that the sword must be sheathed, that our armies must be disbanded, and this mighty Republic be humiliated in compromise with a band of demagogues and traitors of the ilk and meanness of such men as William Bigler.

NOW FOR THE WAR.

Our Republican cotemporaries in the States which have just held elections, are uniting to give the Administration a full and hearty support. Those who have been beaten in political fight, show their good sense to yield gracefully, and wherever this has been the case, our Republican cotemporaries submit to the ill-fortunes of politics, and turn with patriotic ardor to find consolation and encouragement in the zeal and enthusiasm with which they can now devote themselves exclusively to the service of their country. And thus that the hurly-burly of the political contest is over, the people, without respect to party, will resume the great work of prosecuting the war. That work—in a measure temporarily suspended—will, we trust, go on more vigorously than ever. Our only salvation, as a Nation, lies in its prosecution to a triumphant end. We have put our hand to the plow and must not look back. We have made our election and have no alternative but to stand by it. We have pledged Europe—we have pledged the world—that we would put down this monstrous conspiracy and restore the Union to its ancient integrity, and Europe and the world will hold us to our word. We have staked all upon the issue of the struggle and must accept the dread result.

THE PATRIOT.

THE PATRIOT, instead of printing the report of the Harper's Ferry Investigating Committee, appears yesterday morning laden with one of Frank Hughes' filthy falsifying productions. Why not give the truth of history instead of the slanders of demagogues? THE OFFICIAL VOTE FOR DELEGATES FROM NEBRASKA foreshadows a majority of 153 for Samuel G. Daily, the Republican candidate. Mr. Daily is the present delegate.

The Greatness of America as an Unit—England's Policy.

[From the Richmond Examiner, Nov. 8.] The greatness of America is a recent revelation to Europe. With the North and South federated under the old Government, the United States possessed a military power and an abundance of resources which her citizens, even in the excess of their self-complacency, never dreamed. But few minds in Europe had any idea of the power of the young giant in the Western World.
