HARRISBURG, PA. Tuesday Afternoon, November 25, 1862

EX-PRESIDENT BUCHANAN TO GENE-RAL SCOTT.

After the crushing rejoinder of Gen. Scott, to the sophistries and lame apologies which Mr. Buchanan had penned to palm on the American public as an excuse for his dereliction of duty, while President, and his questionable loyalty during all the time that his Cabinet were preparing to destroy the government—after all this, sensible men fondly imagined that Mr. Buchanan would take advantage of the privacy of Wheatland, and forever bury himself in silence amid its bachelor school.

The knowledge so draify acquired. The sensible men fondly imagined by that rebel sympathizers elsewhere, who do nothing but grumble at the government, had not the opportunity of learning in the same bury himself in silence amid its bachelor school. gloom and freezing formalities. But in this the public have been disappointed. The itching anxiety of the Ex-President to es cape the odium which is surrounding to crush gem to escape, if possible, the awful doom of reproach and disgrace which awaits him. He proach and disgrace which awaits him. He appears to day in another letter addressed to Gen. Scott, and in this epistle he again attempts to make the most insignificant circumstances the evidence of his innocence and patriotism. We can only ask the reader to prove this letter to ensure for Mr. Ruchanan one of his subordinates as particularly hanvy in this letter to ensure for Mr. Ruchanan one of his subordinates as particularly hanvy in the desired to writing on the very day, is cuttled to the greater credit.

"The General, in the introduction of his rejoinder, assigns as an excuse for the criticism on my public conduct that this was merely incidental to his alleged official report to President Lincoln on the condition of our fortifications, and was not primarily intended for myself. peruse this letter, to ensure for Mr. Buchanan one of his subordinates as particularly happy in the disgust and contempt which he has earned keeping within sight of his base as long as he had made such a report. But where is that by this last effort at sophistry. Every step he takes in his own defence only develops and augments his guilt, so that the man who suc
menced its preparations for an advance on Seward, dated on the 3d March, 1861, advising augments his guilt, so that the man who sucthe disgraced Ex-President, will prove James Buchanan's best friend. Let the reader peruse rebel capital from tree tops and other elevated tence to this letter he barely refers to his the letter referred to, and then endorse our reference as a matter of conviction and neces-

THE NEW PHASE OF TREASON.

Every one will remember, says the Daily Morning Chronicle, that President Buchanan's denial of power in the Federal Government to coerce tractors was the chief means by which the rebellion acquired its formidale proportions. That denial was put torth under cover of a long string of sophisms in his last annual mes sage, and was supported by an "opinion" from Judge Black, his attorney general. This surrender of executive power, whether arising from personal timidity, mental weakness, or political disloyalty, was the first great stroke against the life of this nation.

The same treasonable designs are now at work against the Government, under pretence of what is called individual rights, or rights of citizens. The plain meaning of the phrase is that individual citizens have a right to carry not reasonable designs against the Government, within the heart of loyal States, without danger of the interference of the G-verument; that the aiders or abettors of treason are subject only to judicial tribunals, so that if the civil law is silent as to the treasonable practice, or the judge happens to sympathize with it, the treason may be practised openly and with absolute safety. It requires only a moment's consideration to perceive that this has been striving to overthrow the Federal government. In the rebel states this treason is organized into armies commanded by generals, whose banners are unfurled to the world, and who boldly proclaim their purpose to overthrow the government. But the phase of treason in the loyal states, as in the first stages it was in the southern states, is at present concealed under a false face. In the south it professed only to set up the rights of states, and their immunity to practice treason against the federal government. It now sets up the rights of individual citizens in the loyal states, and their immunity to practice against the government. Stripped of all disguise, the treason is the same in either phase, the change of disguise being required by the different sphere of action where it is carried on.

As loyal citizens in the southern states were deluded into sympathy with rebellion, and are unconsciously made its aiders and comforters by the cry of state rights, so the enemies of the government are now striving to delude loyal aid and protection to domestic traitors by the cry of individual rights.

The Constitution was perverted and used for the shield of southern traitors, and northern traitors are now setting up the habeas corpus as a rampart behind which they may safely carry on the assault against the national existence.

2. Secretary Floyd, under suspicious circumstances, on the 22d December, 1860, and out a few days before he left the Department. had, without the knowledge of the President, ordered one hundred and thirteen (113) columbiads and eleven (11) thirty-two pounders to be transported from Pittstung to Ship Island and Galveston, in Mississippi and Texas. This fact was brought to the knowledge of the President by a communication from Pittsburg; and Secretary Holt: immediately, thereafter: countermanded the order of his predecessor, and the cannon were never sent. The promptitude with which we acted elicited a vote of thanks, dated on the 4th of January, 1861, from the Select and Common Councils of that city "to the President, the Attorney General, and the acting Secretary of War," (Mr. Holt.) "After this statement how shall we account for the explicit declaration of General Scott that 'accidentally hearing early in March that under this posthumous order (that of Mr. Floyd of the 22d December) the shipment of these guns had commenced, I communicated the fact to Secretary Holt, (acting for Secretary Cameron,) just in time to defeat the robbery? this is the same Secretary Holt who had coun termanded the 'posthumus order' in the previons December. And, strange to say, these guns, but for the alleged interposition of Gen. Scott, were about to be sent so late as March from the Loyal States into those over which Jefferson Davis had then for some time presided!

"Had Gen: Scott reflected for a moment he could not have fallen into this blunder. It is quite manifest he was 'without a printed focument and my (his) own official papers.'

"3. 'The Government had on hand in the year 1859 about 500,000 old muskets, which had been condemned as unsuitable for public service, under the act of 3d of March, 1825 .-They were of such a character that, although offered both at public and private sale for $2 50 each, purchasers could not be obtained at that rate, except for a comparatively small number. On the 30th of November, 1859, Secretary Floyd ordered about one-fifth of the whole number (105,000) to be sent from the Springfield armory, where they had accumulated, to five Southern arsenals, in proportion to their respective means of proper storage.

"This order was carried into effect by the Ord nance Bureau in the usual course of administration and without reference to the President. It is but justice to say that from the testimony pect that Secretary Floyd issued this order from dency, and nearly a year before his election and whilst the Secretary was still an avowed opponent of secession.
