THE PEOPLE'S CHOICE FOR PRESIDENT, ABRAHAM LINCOLN

HARRISBURG, PA.

TUESDAY EVENING, MARCH 29, 1864.

State Sovereignty Decaying in the Hands

One of the cardinal points of the Democracy, and which contributed the venom and the falsehood and the deviltry to the efforts of the men now in rebellion, has been, and professes yet to be, that the States were and are sovereign, each, in some respects, an independent power, with rights and franchises which none could yield without relapsing from the dignity of Commonwealths to that of the mere dependence of a colony. On this doctrine the slaveholders based their Democracy, and their right to revolt against the National Government. On the same doctrine, too, northern dough-face Democrats justified themselves in giving aid and comfort to the conspirators. The National authority, in the judgment of these men, was a mere toy, to be used for the amusement of those who come in contact with it-to be thrown to one side when it ceased to subserve the idea's of the demagogue and the tyrant. This was called State Sovereignty. In other particulars the same men conducted themselves with what they termed like sovereign independence, recognizing the right of no central power to assume the control of their political actions. Indeed, even in our day, (and we are no old man,) we can remember when the Democracy of Pennsylvania dictated, as it were, rules of action for the Democracy of the Nation, always admitting, of course, that such action was a concurrence with the wishes, the aspirations and the interests of the slave-drivers. Pennsylvania, by accepting the title of the wheel-horse of the Democracy, signified that the State was ready to draw all that the slaveholders condeacended to place upon the wagon of party. But to what end has this great bugaboo of State sovereignty, both as it relates to parties and government, come? Let the proceedings of the last Democratic State Convention answer. In that body the leaders of the Pennsylvania Democracy yielded all that they possessed of sovereignty—gave up what remained of their independence, and acknowledged that the Democracy of the old Keystone State were no longer capable of conceiving or even enunciating a platform of principles. In fact the confession is frank and fair, that the Democracy of Pennsylvania have no longer any principles to announce. The party in this State has surrendered its sovereignty. The leaders here have become the most abject slaves, and offer to cast themselves on the consideration of a band of political rascals, shortly to assemble in Chicago, and yield to that convention the construction of a platform. Indeed, so completely used up are the leaders of the Democracy, that they fear even to venture the enunciation of their peculiar lies against those in authority. They are willing to give up all to the gamblers who are to assemble in National Convention, where the purpose to destroy the Government will be reduced to a principle for the support of every copperhead in the land. -We know the day when the Democracy of Pennsylvania did not occupy so servile a position before the men of the Nation. Then the Democracy of Pennsylvania were led by politicians of ability and sagacity—now that party is dragged through the dirt by poltroons

A Blow from the Right Quarter.

Before the rebels arranged to make the effort for the forcible introduction of slavery into all the States and Territories of the country, they were encouraged to make an armed resistance to the Government by their Northern allies, and thereby humiliate the spirit of freedom which was demonstrating itself in the Northern, Eastern and Western State authorities. The Democracy had lost control of the National Government, and on that account they were anxious to see the ensuing administration of President Lincoln, not only humilliated, but absolutely compelled to retire. Democratic leaders in the free States argued with the leaders of the South, that if they made an armed demonstration of resistance the people of the free States, rather than fight. would agree to the forcible retirement of Mr. Lincoln from the Presidency, and accept in lieu of him, any man whom the South might in their condescension, name as a President. In return for all this, the people of the free States, the men who contribute the actual wealth of the Government, would defray all the expense of the demonstration on the part of the South. That was, and still is, the hope of the leading traitors. If they were successfal, then these wretches could compel the free States to defray the expense of the rebellion. If they failed, then they trusted to the efforts of their Democratic friends, for resources to pay the debts of treason.

-This subject is already taking shape among the loyal men in the rebel States; and we see that the Free State Executive Committee have adopted the following resolution: Resolved. That the Free State party are uncompromisingly opposed to assuming any debts contracted by the State of Louisiana, while under rebel rule, for the purpose of carrying on the war against the United States.

School Economy: A treatise on the Preparation, Organization, Employments and Authorities of Schools. By James P. Wickersham, A. M., Philadelphia. J. B. Lippencott. & Co.

It is a remarkable fact, that at no period in the history of this State or nation, have greater efforts been directed towards the im provement of all systems of education, than at the present. One would have supposed, with the nation involved in a bloody effort for its existence, the education of the young for its existence, the education of the young Governor, express the hope that if the counwould have been neglected in the struggle try were divided the line might run north of and preparation of war. Happily for the future of the Government this is not the case.

to the public, while it is of a character not to attract general attention, will nevertheless command the respect and careful consideration of those to whom it is addressed. To school directors and teachers, this work must prove invaluable, as it simplifies every duty imposed upon these, and leaves no feature in the organization of a school undiscussed. Indeed, a careful study of such a volume would have a tendency often to develope a facility for teaching.

The work is for sale at Bergner's cheap book store, Market street.

It having been reported that the Government was being defrauded in the article of coffee, and that ground glass was found in the bottom of barrels, a commission was appointed to examine into the subject. The result s that some coffee had been emptied into a barrel which previously contained fragments of a bottle. This is the origin of the charge of fraud.

Our Common Schools -- No. 11. Since the date of my last communication the Trustees of the Harrisburg Academy have had a meeting, and have taken measures to se-cure the prolongation of the lease of their buildings and grounds on Front street. The majority of the Board are of the opinion that, under existing circumstances, this course is the best that could be pursued, and mainly for the following reasons: "Why," they ask, "should we transfer this property to the control of a body of men who confessedly are not now complying with the terms of the law under which they are holding office? What assurance have we that they could establish and secure, for the benefit of the public, such schools as we would have a right to expect? And whilst men are elected to the office of School Director who are manifestly so incompetent to discharge its impor-tant duties, why should we entrust still greater responsibilities in their hands?"

There is much weight in these considerations, it must be admitted. But upon whom does it fall?

I hope, Mr. Editor, that the School Direc-I hope, Mr. Editor, that the School Directors of our city will begin to see where they stand. Had they complied, as they should have done, and were urged to do, with the plain terms of the law, by consolidating the boards and grading all the schools of the city, systematically and thoroughly, so as to be ready to complete the arrangement by the addition of one high school for males and one for females, there would now have been no serious difficulty in the way of the proposed erious difficulty in the way of the proposed transfer of a very valuable property into their hands, that would at once have enabled them to carry out this design almost without any additional taxation. Their course has been penny-wise and pound foolish.

So much for the past; that cannot now be remedied. But how as to the future? Will they now and henceforth set themselves to work to carry out the law in its letter and spirit? If they do, we shall soon see a vast improvement in all our schools. The children will be promoted from grade to grade as they are prepared for it, and not just as the crowded state of the rooms may push them from one department to another. They will then be transferred from one grade to another They will in regular classes, and each teacher will know precisely at what stage of their progress he receives his pupils and how far he is expected and required to carry them. Primary schools will be increased in number and diminished in size; and those to be hereafter established will be so located as to be distributed equally throughout the whole city. With the rising of the grade the number of schools will diminish, until of the highest grade there will be but one for each sex. The question, as to how high the standard of this last grade shall be, will have to be decided by the people themselves in choosing their directors. If the majority of the citizens prefer having it of such a character as to render private schools unnecessary, they can elect such directors as are known to favor such an arrangement. Meanwhile, it is a serious question with those who, through the neglect of the controllers to provide such schools as these, are compelled to send their children to private schools, whether they shall submit to an onerous taxation from which they thus derive comply with the law, they have three dangers to apprehend, either of which may suddenly them no small embarrassment. 1. Tax payers may say: "Give us better schools for our larger children, so that we need not send them to select schools, or we will not pay our taxes." And what will the Directors reply to this? If they do not strictly comply with the law, they cannot compel the payment of the taxes they impose. . The State Superintendent of Common Schools may say: "Comply with the letter and spirit of the law, or I will withhold your portion of the annual appropriation for com-mon school purposes." In that case, we shall mon school purposes." In that case, we shall have to make up the deficiency, perhaps $2000, by a direct extra tax, and still have no improvement in our schools. 3. The law expressly provides, that "if controllers shall refuse or neglect * * * to perform any other duty enjoined by law, the court of quarter sessions of the proper county may, upon complaint in writing by any six taxable citizens of the district, and on due proof thereof, declare their seats vacant and appoint others in their stead, until the next annual election for directors." The proper showing, therefore, that the present controllers have in any respect evaded the provisions of the law, in their case made and provided, would subject them to rather rough handling, and should be avoided, if possible.

We hope they will take another good look at the law, and then set to work and carry it out with a will They have much to encourage them in this good work. Past ineffectual attempts of individual directors have prepared the way for rapid progress, if the matter be laid hold of in earnest by the present board. The partial grading, as it now exists in both wards, may be readily modified and improved. Several resolution was passed. excellent teachers, already in active service, stand prepared to lend their cordial and efficient co-operation in carrying out the system. The North ward already possesses a female school of unusual excellence, and its principal male school would deserve the same com-mendation were it not for the cramming system that has been retarding its elevati This praise, however, is due solely to the more than ordinary capacity and zeal and diligence of the teachers in these respective schools, who have been toiling and struggling under great disadvantages. Let us hope that a better day is coming, when the common schools of Harrisburg will be models of ex cellence from the lowest to the highest; so good, indeed, that every citizen may be proud to send his children there, and that strangers may find, in our admirable schools, an induce ment to select our city as their home.

The Peosta and Pawpaw were the gunboats which participated in the engagement. They opened fire simultaneously with the fort on the enemy's advance into the city, and ren-dered invaluable service throughout the affair.
