HARRISBURG, PA.

SATURDAY EVENING, NOVEMBER 26, 1864. The Path to the National Capital.

It has always been the boast of the slaveholders that the Constitution of the United States not only sanctioned and recognized slavery, but that the paths to the national capital were through slave States, and that the interests of slavery were thus joined to the safety of the capital of the nation, and therefore one could not be impaired without endangering the security of the other. Like all the other arguments and positions to serve slavery, this has been swept away by the billows of war, and now for the first time in the history of the Republic, a path to the national capital has been opened through free territory. The emancipation policy adopted in Maryland, breaks the dark bonds in which slavery had invested freedom's capital. Had slavery been content to enjoy the privilege it possessedhad those who lived in luxury and ease by the barter in human flesh, been satisfied with their social power, and not aimed at bending all interests to the service of their institution, Maryland to-day would have still been a slave State, and the path to the national capital would have led, at least during this century, if not for the greater part of the next, through Slave territory.

In addition to the gratifying result in Maryland, by which a State has been wrested from slavery, the fact that the sympathizers with the slaveholders' cause were defeated in New York at the late election, is equally important to all the true friends of freedom. New York and Pennsylvania are now in the hands of loval men. In a few weeks New York will have a loval Governor, who acting, in conjunction with Governor Curtin, of Pennsylvania, will indeed complete the security of the free path to the National Capital. This is another result of the slaveholders' rebellion. Had the Democratic leaders of the Empire State, been true to themselves and their country, nothing could have defeated the re-election of Governor Seymour. But he and is friends adopted the cause in the interest of slavery, and thus another mighty Commonwealth was forced, as it were, to declare for freedom that there might be no mistake about her adherence to the National Government. These are all compensatory results for the sacrifice made to crush the slaveholders' rebellion. A free path to the National Capital, and free States united for the control of the sympathizers with treason.

The Home Vote at the October Election.

We stated, some time since, that it would be impossible ever to arrive at the "home vote" cast at the October election. It appears now that, in answer to circulars issued from the State Department, requesting Prothonotaries to report this vote, a large number of such officers failed thus to report, and it is therefore settled that we will never have a definite official statement of the result of the October election, so far as the home vote is concerned. The following are the counties from which, up to noon yesterday, no report had been received:

Adams, Allegheny, Cambria, Cameron, Columbia, Fulton, Forest,	Lebanon,	Pike, Sullivan, Tioga, Washington, Wayne, York,

The effort to reproach the Secretary of the Commonwealth for the failure of the Prothonotaries to report the "home vote" cast in the various election districts of the different counties, is simply ridiculous. With equal good sense and justice, the same newspapers might as well assail Mr. Slifer because an overwhelming majority of the people of Pennsylvania refused to indorse George B. McClel. lan. The distinction between the resident and the army vote, at the October election, was something new, as indeed was the regulation attending the entire operating law enfranchising the soldier. Election boards and return judges were not thoroughly the people. acquainted with the working minutia of the law on the subject. Hence, when the returns were made out, confusion could not fail to follow in the form of such returns, but at the same time, even with this admitted confusion, we believe that in no case did the informality thus attending these proceedings defeat the objects of the law. The votes of the soldiers, when they were not separately counted, were still given in the aggregate returns of judges practicing this informality. This is all that justice demands. It a few betting men have failed to arrive at satisfactory understandings, the great body of the people are satisfied. What more could be desired?

According to a New York correspondent of the London Herald, the much talked of book on "Miscegenation" was a great hoax, 'written by two young gentlemen connected with the newspaper press of New York, both of whom are obstinate Democrats in politics, and was got up solely with a view of committing, if possible, the orators and essayists of of the Republican party to the principle it enunciated, that of the complete social equality, by marriage, of the white and black races." As the writer virtually admits, although the book hoaxed everybody, it failed of accomplishing its object, and the "Republican party" paid little attention to it, except in ridicule of the "Democratic" effort to make political use of it.

LIEUT. GEN. GRANT, during his late visit to New York, paid his respects to Gen. Scott, who presented the hero of Chattanooga with a copy of his Autobiography, writing on the fly leaf of one of the volumes, "From the oldest to the best soldier in the world." Such a comto the best soldier in the world. Such a com-pliment from such a man, is worth fighting for to be sent to the hospitals, many to leave during a life-time.

DISTANCES ON SHERMAN'S ROUTE. The following information cannot fail to be of interest to those who are desirous of tracing the course of General Sherman in his great movement. We learn, then, that the first station directly south of Atlanta is East Point, six miles below, which is the junction of the Macou and Western Railroad with the Atlanta and Montgomery road. The main railroad chain which the Rebels possess extends from Meridian, on the Mississippi Central, through Selma and Montgomery, Alabama, Columbus, Macon, and Augusta, Georgia, Columbus, Carth. Carolina and the principal sitters of South Carolina, and the principal cities of North Carolina. The most direct point at which this road can be cut is at Macon, Georgia, which is distant one hundred and four miles from Atlanta. Montgomery, Alabama, is one hundred and seventy-five miles from
