THE DEATH OF JAMES IRVIN .--- We published a notice of the death of James Irvin, Co. E, 201st Penna Vols., in our paper of Saturday, when it was reported that he had been killed while attempting to arrest deserters. We have since learned the particulars of the mel-ancholy affair, by which it appears that Mr. L came to his untimely end through the care less handling of fire arms on the part of a comrade. We are informed that two adjoining rooms were occupied by James Irvin and John Funk. In the partition between the rooms there is a window, used for ventilation, at a considerable height from the floor. Early on Saturday morning Mr. Irvin seized an old pis-tol, which was not loaded, and, standing upon his hod extended his houd through the rin his bed. extended his hand through the window, and jestingly demanded Funk's money or his life. Funk suddenly laid hold of a gun (which he supposed to be his own)and snap ped it at Irvin, when a loud report followed, and Irvin fell headlong to the floor. A bullet and Irvin fell nearing to the noor. A bunket had entered his head near the right temple, and passed out back of his ear. He was at once placed upon a bed, and medical aid sum-moned, but death ensued about an hour after moned, but death ensued shows an investigation of the accident occurred. Funk's gun was not loaded, but he unfortunately seized another instead of his own, and through this mistake he unintentionaly killed his fellow-soldier. The two men were on most intimate terms, and were fast friends Mr. Funk's sorrow on account of this occurrence cannot be described.

The remains of Mr. Irvin arrived here early on Sunday morning, in charge of a number of his companions in arms.
