LOVE'S REPROACH:

Dear Tom, my brave, free-hearted lad, Where'er you go, God bless you; You'd better speak than wish you had, If love for me distress you. To me, they say, your thoughts incline, And possibly they may so : Then once for all, to quiet mine,

On that sound heart and manly frame To parent, friend, or neighbor. Then why postpone your love to own For me, from day to day so, And let me whisper, still alone,

With some remembered folly, The sight of you has made me glad,-And then most melancholy! Ah! why will thoughts of one so good Upon my spirit prey so?
By you it should be understood—
"Tom, if you love me, say so."

Last Monday, at the cricket-match, No rival stood before you; In harvest time, for quick dispatch, The farmers all adore you: And evermore your praise they sing, Though one thing you delay so, And I sleep nightly murmuring,

Whate'er of ours you chance to seek, Almost before you breathe it, I bring with blushes on my check, And all my soul goes with it. And faltering turn away so? When next you come, before you go

When Jasper Wild, beside the brook, Resentful rous d us lowered, I oft recall that lion-look That quelied the savage coward. Bold words and free you uttered then,— Would they could find their way so,—

Ah, no! for they are rich in you, Their happiness is endless. You never let them shed a tear, Save that on you they weigh so; There's one might bring you better cheer, Tom, if you love me, say so.

Or better trained to use it. Tom, if you love me, say so.

Not the least wonderful, even of the many wonderful things of our day, and a living proof of the truth of Christianity, is the distinct and separate preservation, without the least shodow of a national abode, of a people numbering millions of individuals, scattered throughout every division and district of the world, possessing talent sufficient, not only for self government, but for the general advancement of civilization, successful in any branch of science or of art to which they devote themselves, exhibiting a fortitude in suffering and an energy in favorable circumstances that have excited the amazement, if not the admiration of all classes. They mingle continually with the business men of different nations, aid in the formation and support of various governments, render their assistance almost whenever and wherever required, and yet remain completely isolated, maintaining a pride of origin that almost forbids sympathy or pity. In this city, and generally throughout this country, where their rights are never invaded, they live so quietly that unless one goes into their quarters, he seldom meets with them. Few of our citizens know them socially, and all are too willing to believe Shylock their true type. But although, as a whole, the Jews have neglected education, and comparatively few have accepted the means of mental improvement placed within their reach by the governments under which they live, some have stepped forth from the ranks, and braving the Christian prejudices that have been accumulating for ages, have drawn the attention of mankind, and left their names on the page of history. Such instances are not very common, because the Jews, for the most part, are so content to live quietly and unostentatiously, and those who are remarkable for their intellectual powers are so inclined to give their undivided attention to the study of ancient records and commentaries. Still the Jews in Europe frequently make to the poker for amusement. He poked the fire valuable contributions to literature and art, and it is not unusual on the Continent to find them holding professorships. Such names as Rothschild, Disraeli, Beethoven, Mendelssohn, and Rachel, illustrate the variety of their talents and the greatness of their capacity, and there is no reason to doubt that, under favorable circumstances, and with such incentives as a fixed national habitation only could furnish, they would develop the same genius that was manifested by their early lawgivers, generals, and historians. In this city their number, at present, is about 40,000, of whom the majority are rather indigent, and either because they begin the battle of life while very young, or are disinclined to hands. L. was just about to apply the poker, social intercourse with others, (having no distinct literary institutions of their own,) or both, they remain uneducated. Their national studies, even if generally pursued, could not give that knowledge of the sciences without which it is impossible to keep pace with the rapid strides of civilization in our day. The minds of such students may be cultivated, but they are not enlightened.

There are seventeen synagogues in New York. The first was erected in Mill St., now South William St, in 1729, where the congregation worshiped for more than a century. Some twenty-five years ago or more they removed to Crosby St., and recently have dedicated a new synagogue in West Ninteenth St., said to be more imposing in appearance than any other in the United States. It is built of Nova Scotia stone, in a style combining two orders of architecture—the Ionic and Corinthian. The entire cost of the structure and its site was about $110,000.

which they are rarely credited, it may be mentioned that two years ago they raised $10,000 as the net proceeds of a ball given to sustain it. Preparations are making to repeat the experiment. Six months ago $20,000 was raised by the Jews of this country, numbering but 150,000, for their brethren in Morocco, who were suffering from the war then raging. In Philadelphia, 15,000 members have estab-tional and eleven charitable associations, and a publication society. The Jews are scattered over the whole country, but are more numerous in commercial cities and towns. Throughout the West, especially, wherever there is a chance for profitable trade, they have insinuated themselves. Two synagogues were recently dedicated in Cincinnati. Wherever they go, their institu-tions accompany them as invariably as the household gods went with the ancient Romans. Since the commencement of the present month, the Jews in this city have been almost constantly occupied in the observance of various solemnities. The Feast of Tabernacles, the Feast of Palms, and the Feast of the Law, have followed each other in quick succession. In a few weeks they will be called on to observe the Feast of the Dedication of the Temple and then a Fast commemorative of the Destruction of Jerusalem. What a world of emotion the celebration of these revered ceremonies must excite! How must the Jew mourn over the departed glories of a nation once so powerful and renowned, now weak and fallen! Is it after all very wonderful that men who can trace their lineage to such an origin, should cling with tenacious vigor to their rites and retuse to blend with others of the race? Is it strange that they wish to preserve pure in their veins the blood of Moses, of David, of Solomon, and the Pro-

Jerusalem was taken by Titus on the 8th of September, A. D. 70. Ninety-seven thousand prisoners were captured during the siege, and eleven thousand died of starvation. The loss of the Jews in killed, wounded and missing, during the war, is computed in round numbers at 1,400,000. The Emperor Verpasian disposed of the Jewish lands for his own use, compelled the conquered people to pay into his treasury the usual tribute of the sanctuary, and cut off the branches of the House of Judah that he might forever deprive them of the hope of deliverance from a coming Messiah. Broken-hearted, they left the land they loved so well, never since to return. They have wandered over Africa and settled on its Eastern and Northern coasts, have traveled far into Asia, within the walls of China, have sought the frozen regions of Russia, the beautiful lands of Spain and Italy, and the wild mountains of Switzerland, have taken up their abode in Germany and Holland, in France, England, Sweden, Norway-in fact, in every land under the sun—everywhere abused and persecuted with a severity and malignity that know no parallel in history. During the past century, however, one government after another has made concessions in their favor, and under this milder treatment they have rapidly increased in numbers and in influence. Even Russia has acknowledged their importance as citizens, and 2,000,000 of them dwell within her empire.— In Germany they are very numerous; the chief magistrate of Hamburg is a Jew. Poland is their stronghold; within its former limits 1,000,million are in nople; 70,000 in Italy; 40,000 in England.— The whole number on the globe is variously estimated at from 6,000,000 to 12,000,000; the probable number is 8,000,000. Of course no pretensions to accuracy can be made in such a

A movement has been initiated at Paris, with the knowledge, and possibly at the instance of the Emperor Napoleon, for the purpose of organizing the whole people into associations, and establishing communication among them.— They have long cherished the expectation of return to the Holy Land. May some of them not think that their restoration draws near? The signs of the times encourage the hope .-The Turkish Empire is falling in pieces, and the occupation of the ancient Canaan by an essentially trading people, when the Suez canal shall have been opened, will add to the commercial facilities and wealth of the world. It is said that Baron Rothschild is intimate with the Emperor, and, ambitious to distinguish himself in the service of his nation, keeps the project constantly before him. A POLITE INVITATION DECLINED .- A contributor to the Spirit of the Times, thus describes a Late one bitter cold night, in December, some eight or nine years ago, L. came into the barroom, as usual, to take his part in whatever was going on. For some reasons the crowd had dispersed sooner than was customary, and but two or three of the townstolks were there. together with a stranger, who had arrived a half-hour or longer before, and who, tired, wet and muddy, from a long Arkansas stage ride, his legs extended, and shoes off, was consoling himself with two chairs and a nap, opposite the centre of the blazing log fire. Any one who has traveled until 10 o'clock, in a rough winter night, over an Arkansas road, can appreciate the comfort of the fruition before that fireplace. The drowsy example of the stranger had its effect on the others, and L., who took a sent in the corner, for lack of conversation was reduced vigorously for a while, until it got red hot, and becoming disgusted, was about to drop it and retire, when he observed the great toe of the stranger's feet protruding through a hole in one of his socks. Here was a relief to L. He placed the glowing poker within a foot of the melancholy sleeper's toe, and began slowly to lessen the distance between them; one by one. the others as they caught the joke began to open their eyes, and being wakened, mouths expanded into grins, and grins into suppressed giggles-and one incontinent fellow's into a broad laugh. Closer and closer the red hot poker neared toward the unfortunate toe. The heat caused the sleeper restlessly to move his tention. He looked at the stranger-the latter with one eye open, had been watching his proceedings, and silently brought a pistol to bear upon L. In a voice just audible he muttered, in a tone of great determination.

"Jest burn it! Burn it! Jest burn it! and I'll be d-d if I don't stir you up with ten thousand hot pokers in two seconds!"

"Stranger, let's take a drink!-in fact gentlemen, all of you." L. afterwards said they were the cheapest
