KELLER'S Drug Store.

NO 44.

MONDAY MORNING, OCT. 22, 1860.

The October number of the Cornhill Magazine opens with the concluding chapter of Mr. Thackcray's "Four Georges," and very severe it is upon "the rascalliest, sweetest young Prince," George the Fat and Fourth. Here

"To make a portrait of him at first seemed a matter of small difficulty. There is his coat, his star, his wig, his countenance simpering under it; with a slate and piece of chalk. I could at this very desk perform a recognizable at a ball, there at a public dinner, there at races and so forth, you find you have nothing nothing but a coat and wig and a mask smiling below it-nothing but a great simulacrum.-His sire and grandsires were men. One knows what they were like; what they would do in given circumstances; that on occasion they fought and demeaned themselves like tough good soldiers. They had friends whom they liked according to their natures; enemies whom they hated fiercely; passions, and actions, and individualities of their own The sailor king who came after George was a man; the Duke of

But this George, what was he? I look through all his life and recognize but a bow and a grin. I try and take him to pieces, and find silk stocking, padding, stays, a coat with frogs and a fur collar, a star and blue ribbon, a pocket-handkerchief prodigiously scented, one of Truefitts best nutry brown wigs recking with oil, a set of teeth, and a huge black stock, underwaistcoats, more underwaistcoats, and then nothing. I know of no sentiment that he distinctly uttered. Documents are published under his name, but people wrote the m-private letters, but people spelt them. He puts a George P. or George R. at the bottom of the page and fancied he had written the paper; some bookseller's clerk, some poor author, some man did the work; saw the spelling; cleaned up the slovenly sentences, and gave the lax maudlin slipslop a sort of consistency. He must have had an individuality; the dancingmaster whom he emulated, nay, surpassedthe wig-maker who curled his toupee for him -the tailor who cut his coats, had that. But. about George, one can get at nothing actual. That outside, I am certain, is pad and tailor's work; there may be something behind, but what? We cannot get at the character; no doubt never shall. Will men of the future bave nothing better to do than to unswathe and interrupt that royal old mummy? I own I once used to think it would be good sport to pursue him, fasten on him, and pull him down, but now am ashamed to mount and lay good dogs on, to summon a full field, and then to hunt the

"And now I have one more story of the bacchanslian sort, in which Clarence and York, and the very highest personage of the realm the great Prince Regent, all play part. The teast took place at the Pavilion, at Brighton, COAL! COAL!! COAL!!! and was described to me by a gentleman who was present at the scene. In Gilray's caricatures, and amoust Fox's jolly associates, there figures a great nobleman, the Duke of Norfolk, called Jocky of Nortolk in his time, and celebrated for his table exploits. He had quartelled with the Prince, like the rest of the Whigs; but a sort of reconciliation had taken place, and now, being a very old man, the Prince invited him to dine and sleep at the Pavilion, and the old duke drove over from his Castle of Arundel, with his famous equipage of gray horses, still remembered in Sussex. "The Prince of Wales had conceeted with his royal brothers a notable scheme for making the old man drunk. Every person at the table was enjoined to drink wine with the Duke-a challenge which the old toper did not refuse. He soon began to see that there was a conspioverthrew many of the brave. At last the First Gentleman of Europe proposed bumpers of brandy. One of the royal brothers filled a great g'ass for the Duke. He stood up and tossed off the drink. 'Now,' says he, I will have my carriage and go home.' The Prince urged upon him his previous promise to sleep under the roof where he had been so generously entervained. 'No,' he id, 'he had been set for bim; he would leave the place at once, and

"The carriage was called, and came; but, in the half-hour's interval, the liquor had proved too potent for the old man; his host's generous purpose was answered, and the duke's old grahead lay stupefied on the table. Nevertheless, when his post-chaise was announced, he stag gered to it as well as he could, and, stumbling DUPONT'S CELEBRATED POWDER! in, bade the postilions drive to Arundel. They drove him for half an hour round the pavili n lawn; the poor old man fancied he was going home. When he awoke that morning he was in bed at the prince's hideous house at Brighton. You may see the place now for sixpence; they have fiddlers there every day; and sometimes buffoons and mountebanks hire the Riding House and do their tricks and tumbling there. The trees are still there, and the gravel walks around which the poor old sinner was tretted. I can fancy the flushed faces of the royal princes as they support themselves at the portico pillars, and look on at old Norfolk's dis grace; but I can't fancy how the man who meeting, one after another, of the aldermen eligible for election to the mayoralty, when a large majority of hands were held up in favor of Alderman Cubitt. The mention of Sir Henry Muggeridge's name was followed by the next greatest number of hands, and that of Alderman Mechi elicited a complimentary cheer. The lord mayor and aldermen proceeded to their chamber to decide between the two for whom the show of hands had preponderated over the rest of the members of their body eligible to fill the office, and on their return the common sargeant at the request of the lord mayor, announced that the election had fallen on Mr. William Cubitt, M. P., alderman and fishmonger. The announcement was followed by loud and prolonged cheering, accompanied by waving of hats and handkerchiefs.

A correspondent of the World furnishes the following novel statement, concerning the

TO THE EDITOR OF THE WORLD :- The allusion made by you in your issue of the -, on the subject of the gipsies, induces me to think that you will give insertion to the following remarks on this singular race: The gipsies have frequently called forth a certain kind and degree of interest, which has often died away again for this particular reason, that little or nothing can be learned from them of their history and condition, on account of the extreme prejudice that is entertained towards them and the singular reserve they show to people outside of their body. But when we gain their confidence we find about the tribe much that is interesting to the generality of intelligent persons. The question that most naturally presents it-self, is, "who are the gipsies?" The reader of history will be surprised to know that they

The gipsies that go about England to day are merely the remains of the wild stock as it entered Great Britain in or previous to the year 1506. In their natural state they are and nave always been a very prolific people. In the early part of the reign of Queen Elizabeth they were estimated, in England, at above 10,000; and, notwithstanding their great natural increase, they are generally set down as "heing of very few in number in England." A late writer in Chambers' E inburgh Journal even makes the assertion that "before this century expires there will not be a gipsy in Western Europe." But at the present day there are in Europe and America together not less than 3,000,000, of all mixtures of blood,

So little is known of the gipsics that people invariably believe that when a gipsy leaves the tent and settles in life, or even travels without a tent, he ceases to be a gipsy! But, notwithstanding every change of whatever kind he may make, he and his discendants never cease to be gipsies! The North American Indians are "dying out," because they depart this life; but the gipsy tribe gradually lenve the tent and gets scattered amid the rest of the population, and mantain their identity as a gion peculiar to themselves. as dist sectul to him as his would be to the ordinary inhabitant. Add to this the fact that the common native, of whatever condition in life, will not associate with him: will not allow h m to enter a school, will even consider it poliution to touch him, of itinerant and settled life. On account of the tribe as it were, "biding itself," as it leaves the tent, the race, such as it is known to the world, never gets the reputation for the improvement of which it is capable, and no one of the tribe, outside of the tent, will say that they are gipsies; consequently the subject of their history is allowed to remain in a slough, out of which it is necessary to drag it. THE PRINCE'S SQUADEON AT PORTLAND .-The squadron on which the Prince of Wales is to embark at Portland, Me., consists of the flagship Nile, 91 guns; the Hero, 90 guns; Ariadne, 26 gans, and Flying Fish, 6 guns. A salute of twenty-one guns was fired from the Hero as she entered the harbor of Portland on Tuesday. After the fleet had anchored the salute was answered from Fort Preble. Subsequently, a sainte to the Comm dore was fired from the fort, which was answered by the guns of the Hero, and the American ensign was run up at the fore. The Hero is com-manded by Commo ore Sterling, and her officers and crew compose 890 men. She has on board six antique looking lanterns, which were on board the Victory when Commodore Nelson fought the battle of Trafalgar. The apartments of the Prince of Wales are fitted up with great neatness, and they appear as comfortable as any parlors and bedrooms, but there is nothing gaudy about them. The same is the case with those of the Duke of Newcastle. It is a somewhat remarkable fact that Tuesday, the day the flert arrived, (except the Nile,) was the eighty-fifth anniversary of that memorathe day when the English fleet, under the command of Commodore Mowatt, entered the harbor of Portland, and reduced the city to

THE GIPSIES.

Gipsies:

are the "mixed multitude" of the exodus that left Egypt under Moses, and separated from the Jews in Arabia Petris, and traveled northeast into India, where, in consequence of the rigidity of caste that has prevailed in that country from time immemorial, they formed themselves into a wandering race, living disinct from all others. Having been runaway slaves of a civilized society, the change of their circumstances naturally led them to adopt that condition which has characterized them since the beginning of the fifteenth century, when they first became known to the inhabitants of Europe.

The original gipsy has therefore no alternative but to hold himself aloof from the rest of his fellow creatures, and even to lead the roving life for which he is so much blamed. He has been born into that state and been reared in it; and knowing no other he naturally follows it, and finds the life of the ordinary inhabitant and you will see how difficult, how almost impossible it is to make anyth ng of what people generally understand to be a gip-y. But whenever the gipsy leaves the tent, and in the popular estimation ceases to be a gipsy, he most rigidly hides from the public the fact that he belongs to the tribe. The tent is the hive from which the tribe swarms; hence, as people know of no other gipsies than those about the hive, they come very quickly to the conclusion that they "can make nothing of the gipsies;" without knowing that the tribe, taking year with year, and tent with tent, are constantly throwing off swarms of gipsies, into all kinds
