The Patriot & Union. SATURDAY MORNING, NOV. 10, 1860. BUFFALO HUNTING IN SOUTH AFRICA.

Buffalo hunting at the Cape is so totally different from the chase of the American hunter that perhaps no account of a day's hunt and description of the Cape buffalo may not prove uninteresting.

From our lofty place of abode we could mark the course of the Pongola river as it flowed through the valley below. The scenery was beautiful; large undulating downs, dotted with clumps of large and majestic trees, gave an idea rather of an extensive park than a wild and uninhabited country.

Such is the African buffalo; cunning and suspicious, it is difficult to approach, but when wounded and its passions roused, it is as dangerous and formidable an antagonist as the keenest sportsman would wish to encounter.

FRIED POTATOES.—One of the wittiest and most genial writers of the New York Daily Press, just now, is "C. H. W.," who, in one of his warring place letters to the Times, describes the ecstasy of fried potatoe eating at Saratoga lake.

Before coming to Saratoga, I encountered a young lady who had just completed the tour of Niagara Falls and the White Mountains. To the question of what she had seen and found most meritorious during her travels, she replied that the fried potatoes at Saratoga lake were delightful.

When you drive up to the door of the Lake Hotel, it is not necessary to say a word; the water sees fried potatoes in your eyes, and passes the word to all. But, if you wish fresh trout, you must make that wish manifest. Very soon an aroma comes floating on the air, and then it is well to go down on the banks of the lake and throw stones in the water till the boy calls you to the house, because the very smell of the sizzling vegetable is intoxicating.

main with the herd after they have ceased to follow the cows, and none but the oldest and strongest bulls separate from the main body. Very early in the morning is the best time for hunting, as they may then be found on the plains, and be intercepted on their return to the bush, and hunted on horseback.
