

TO AGRICULTURISTS.

FATTENING SHEEP IN WINTER.—The profit of fattening sheep during the winter months in this country, depends principally on the increased price obtained for the mutton in the spring.

In England, where fattening sheep in winter is carried on more extensively than in any other country, the profit is due simply to the increase of mutton and to the value of the manure obtained from the sheep.

But assuming that we can buy sheep in the fall for two and a half cents per pound, and sell them in February or March for five cents per pound, the account would stand something like this: A sheep weighing eighty pounds the first of November, cost $2.00.

If, then, mutton was as high in the fall as in the spring, say five cents per pound live weight, we should obtain only one penny for the sheep consumed by the sheep; but if it can be bought for half the price in the fall that it commands in the spring, we obtain $20 per ton for the hay.

These figures may not be absolutely correct, but we give them to illustrate the advantage which our farmers have in being able to obtain a much higher price for meat in the spring than in the fall.

We seek advisedly when we say that there is much more profit in fattening sheep during the winter in this country, than in England, notwithstanding the higher price obtained there for mutton.

If the profit of fattening sheep in winter depended solely on the increase of the sheep, say Cotswold, Leicester or Southdown, would be the most profitable sheep to fatten—as they will increase more, for the food consumed, than the Merino. There can be no doubt on this point.

But, as we have shown, this is not the only question. We must go back of this and see which breed of sheep can be bought at the lowest price per pound in the fall. At present, there are four in this country, and that of a better quality can be obtained from a given quantity of food from the fine woolled sheep than from the large English breeds.

Our esteemed correspondent, John Johnson, who has had much experience in fattening sheep, informed us some years ago, that the common fine woolled sheep of the country were the most profitable he could buy for fattening in winter.

For fattening, then, select the largest and thickest sheep that can be obtained at a proportional cost. The fatter they are to commence with the better; for this fat has been put on at a less cost than it can be done during the winter on clover hay and grain.

For fattening sheep in winter there is nothing equal to good clover hay. We have known sheep increase over two pounds per week on clover hay alone for four months.

They were Southdowns, and eat about three pounds each per day. A little grain or oil-cake can be fed with profit, if the increased value of the manure is taken into consideration.

Sheep will bear pretty close confinement.—We have seen them fattened in England in pens where there was little more room than was necessary for them to lie down comfortably.

They were placed on narrow boards, say two or three inches wide, with an inch between each board for the droppings to pass through. The pens were thatched to keep off the rain, and were closed up on three sides.

Another point must not be forgotten. Sheep are timid animals. No one should have anything to do with them who is not a gentle-man. A dog is an especial nuisance.

water: a little salt, (we think,) and plenty of nutritious food are the essentials of successful sheep-breeding.

As to the quantity of grain it will pay to feed sheep, we think more than a half to three quarters of a pound per head per day is rarely fed to advantage, unless they are very large sheep.

It is much more common to feed too little grain than too much. It would be well for most farmers to make a rule never to sell corn or oats off the farm.

WOLFF'S PHOSPHATE OF IRON RESTORATIVE. A Superior and Stimulating Preparation of Iron Purified of Oxygen and Carbon by combustion in Hydrogen.

As a Superior and Stimulating Preparation of Iron Purified of Oxygen and Carbon by combustion in Hydrogen, sanctioned by the highest Medical Authorities, both in Europe and the United States, and prescribed in their practice.

The experience of thousands daily proves that no preparation of iron can be compared with it. Impurities of the blood, depression of vital energy, pale and sallow complexion, indicate its necessity in almost every conceivable case.

It is this latter property, among others, which makes it so remarkably efficacious a permanent remedy for Phlegm, upon which it also appears to exert a distinct and specific action, by dispersing the local tendency which forms them.

In unobscured Dyspepsia, even when advanced to Dyspepsia, the medicinal effects of this preparation are equally decided and astonishing.

In the local pains, loss of flesh and strength, debility of the system, and in all the first diseases of infants, the use of this preparation is highly recommended.
