died, though the battle of the Alma was a exploit more friendly to him than any Marshal, for it sent his name triumphantly to Paris, where he was lauded as a hero. At Inkermann he distinguished himself by his generalship and his courage. They say, regardless of his rank, he dashed into the fight with the ardor of a subaltern. His glittering sabre strewed the ground with corpses, and his men cheered in a frenzy of excitement at the daring of their chief. Bosquet's succor to Lord Raglan's troops in a moment of peril, rendered him a favorite with the English army. Parliament voted him formal thanks for this exploit, and the Sultan decorated him with the order of the Medjidie of the first class-an honor accorded before only to sovereigns and princes of the blood. Bosquet was at the Mamelon Vert and at the taking of Malakoff, fighting always in the bloodiest manner. It was said of him, like St. Arnaud, that he grew crazy at the sight and smell of blood, and woe then to the man within reach of his sabre. When he went back to France the Emperor could not avoid taking marked notice of him. He was successively made Senator, Marshal of France, Knight of the Bath (in England) and Knight of the Legion of Honor. His honors were rich and plenty. They gave him a royal income, and like a rollicking soldier he spent it. Bosquet's equipages, Bosquet's dinners and Bosquet's amours were the talk of all Paris. His bearing was a fine one, the rough experience of camps had given him a manly grace, and in the prime of life he seemed determined to drain the cup of pleasure in the capilal to the dregs. There were rumors in the clubs of the sad and profligate revels which Bosquet, the Emperor and the Count de Fleury held at St. Cloud palace. Bosquet's name was on every tongue. He was a vrai lion. One bright morning, however, his time came. He paid the penalty of his immorality, with his death wound. The bright eyes of the wife of a young inferior offi-cer had attracted him, and his prestige, his chivalrio, generous ways, his gallant, military presence proved a poor lady's ruin. Discovered by the outraged husband, he was not allowed time to defend himself, and, helpless and unarmed, he received the avenging swordblade deep in his breast. The warm blood nearly spurted forth the gay Marshal's life, but finally the wound was staunched, and a suffering, almost dying man, he was conveyed to his own residence. The story was hushed as much as possible. A duel, &c., were given as the cause of his illness, but soon the entire adventure became known, and the clubs chattered and gossiped freely about it. The Emperor protected the young officer at Bosquet's request. He went through a mock trial, and was acquitted. In the Italian war, recently, he served with distinction. All this time nine weary months-Bosquet lingered on, day after day, his wound slowly killing him. Stretched on a sick bed, the once dashing officer must have indulged in sad reflections. They say he prayed, and prayed for death. Probably nobody thought of offering him the consolations of religion—how they sneer at those things there-though the woman for whom he was dying and an affectionate sister gave him every sympathy and care. Finally, the spirit fled, and at the age of 51, the hero Bosquet is honored by a gorgeous, imposing funeral. What a lamentable finale, and isn't the whole career peculiarly French?-Boston

Syrid.—The Paris papers publish a telegram from Constatinople, dated February 2, announcing that the European Commission at Beyrout had proposed to establish in Syria one sole government for the Christian inhabitants, under the protection of the European Powers. According to the same telegram, the Porte had proposed the establishment of two Governments, with general councils composed of Christian and Mussulman members. A letter from Alexandria, dated the 12th of January, conveys important news from Syria. It states that a fresh massacre of Christians by Druses has been perpetrated. The number of victims is not given, nor the name of the village in which the alleged massacre took place. We are merely told that while the inhabitants of a village on Mount Lebanon were attending service in a church, a band of Druses burst into the sacred edifice and horribly massacred them. On the receipt of the news, Fuad Pacha, the letter adds, immediately dispatched a body of troops to the place, who surrounded the village and took some 950 of the Druses prisoners, and they are said to be now under trial at Beyrout.

A PROSPECTIVE STAMPEDE.—Private advices from different parts of the State inform us that a large number of our largest slaveholders are already making preparations for an exodus, which they consider may be rendered necessary as well by the dilatory action of the convention now assembled, as by final submission on the part of the convention. When this prospestive stampede shall once become present and actual, none can predict the extent to which it will be carried. Some opine that some of our largest and most flourishing agricultural districts will be left as desolate as the wilderness of Jamaica. Even if it shall fall far short of this, it will still involve incalculable damage to our interests. These large slaveholders com-prehend a large quota of the very flower of our population—representing much of the wealth, talent, virtue and commanding influence of the State. They will carry away from us what is far more valuable to the State than propertythousands and tens of thousands of busy hands, which now constitute the productive labor of the State.—Richmond Enquirer.

HOW THE SEA FORTS AT CHERBOURG ARE PRESERVED.—Mussel shellfish fasten themselves to piers with a material resembling coarse silk, which resists the force of the most powerful waves. The French engineers at Cherbourg have availed themselves of this faculty of the mussel to bind their great breakwaters. These consist of loose masses of stone; and on them are planted several tons of this shellfish, that they may bind all firmly together with their strong cordage. In this, it is said, they have succeeded. It reminds us of the long-rooted and spreading grass with which, in Holland, shifting sands are fixed; the same thing is done in some places on the east coast of Scotland .- London Builder.

I beg leave to call the attention of the citizens of the United States to the above Wines and Liquors, imis familiar in every part of this country for the purity of his celebrated Schiedam Schipps. Mr. Wolfe, in his letter to me, speaking of the purity of his Wins and Liquors, says: "I will stake my reputation as a man, my standing as a merchant of thirty years' residence in the City of New York, that all the Branyr and Wines which I bottle are pure as imported, and of the best quality, and can be relied upon by every purchaser.' Every bottle has the proprietor's name on the wax, and a fac simile of his signature on the certificate. The public arc respectfully invited to call and examine for themselves. GEORGE H. ASHTON,

No. 832 Market street, Philadelphia.

Read the following from the New York of Medicant.—We are happy to inform our fellow-citizens that there is one place in our city where the physician, apothecary, and country merchant, can go and purchase pure Wines and Liquors, as pure as imported, and of the best quality. We do not intend to give an elaborate description of this merchant's extensive business, although it will well repay any stranger or citizen to visit Uboleno Wolfe's extensive warehouse, Nos. 18, 20 and 22, Beaver street, and Nos. 17, 19 and 21, Marketheld street. His stock of Schnapps on hand ready for shipment could not have been less than thirty thousand cases; the Brandy, some ten thousand cases of Madeira, Sherry and Port Wines, &c., in casks, under Custom-House key, ready for bottling. Mr. Wolfe, sales of Schnapps last year amounted to one hundred and eighty thousand dozen, and we hope in les Liquors.

We understand Mr. Wolff, for the accommodation of small dealers in the country, puts up assorted cases of Wines and Liquors. Such a man, and such a merchant, should be sustained against his tens of thousands of opponents in the United States, who sell nothing but imitations, ruinous alike to human health and happiness.
