

A TRUE STORY OF THE LIGHTS AND SHADOWS OF LIFE-LOVE AND CONSTANCY, VERSUS CRIME.

New York Correspondence Buffalo Commercial.

The steamer for Liverpool, on Saturday last, took out as passengers two persons whose histories for the two or three years last past would, if "worked up" by the pen of even a mediocre novelist, create a sensation. Truth is, indeed, stranger than fiction, as I think your readers will say when they read these facts, vouchered for by your correspondent—by the Superintendent of Police, and substantiated by Governor Morgan. Without any necessary infultion or literary pain, I will proceed to dish up the facts, promising that the names of the principals, for obvious reasons, must remain secrets with those whom I have named, and with a half-score of others who are conversant with the circumstances. The story I will baptize with the homely title of

THE HISTORY OF THE TWO BIBLES. In 1856 Thomas Shotwell, a young man of respectable family, and the son of a wealthy manufacturer of Leeds, England, became acquainted with and married Julia Tillison, the only daughter of another rich manufacturer of Sheffield. The union was sanctioned by the parents and maters of both parties, and for a few months the course of true love ran smooth, and preparations were made by the young people to set up for themselves, upon the funds expected from their respective "governors;" but a year after the wedding, the elder Shotwell succumbed to the financial pressure—he was bankrupt—and his family worse than beggars. The young man, finding his son-in-law penniless, set about devising some means to get rid of him, quietly but effectually. The army in the East were in want of recruits, so a commission was purchased for young Shotwell, and he was assigned to the Regiment of Horse. Old Tillison, finding himself free from the incubus of a "poor relation," devised how he should make the separation between his daughter and her husband perpetual. He first procured to be published in the Service Gazette a report of the death of the younger Shotwell, and by a conspiracy with a post-officer's clerk in London, succeeded in intercepting all communication between the youngsters.

In less than a year after the publication of young Shotwell's death, his supposed widow was induced to marry again, and this time to a worthy and wealthy sea captain named Post, engaged in the American trade, whom she accompanied to New York in March last. She had scarcely been there one month when her second husband died, leaving her a fortune of some $12,000. For some reason Mrs. Post remained in this city and boarded at a well known and fashionable English boarding-house on Twenty-fourth street, where she will leave her to give a history of her first husband after his arrival in India. Not being able to gain any intelligence from his wife, whom he truly and devotedly loved, he gave way to his passions, and endeavored to drown his grief in dissipation. The first news he received from his wife was her marriage with Post. A career of dissipation followed this intelligence, and in a drunken brawl he attacked and maimed a superior brother officer who playfully rallied him on his domestic troubles, for which he was court-martialed and sentenced to be confined in a cell for a month. The circumstances of the case being known to the Governor-General, his sentence was suspended, but he was cashiered and dismissed from service. He too found an asylum in New York almost simultaneously with his former wife.

Having never been schooled to labor, and having no vocation by which to earn a living—a stranger in a strange land, outlawed by his government, his case excited the sympathy of Mr. Wright of the Park Hotel, who generously gave him a home until he could be put in a cell on his domestic troubles, for which he was court-martialed and sentenced to be confined in a cell for a month. The circumstances of the case being known to the Governor-General, his sentence was suspended, but he was cashiered and dismissed from service. He too found an asylum in New York almost simultaneously with his former wife.

On the day he left the city for the State Prison he was visited by a reporter of a New York daily, who acquainted him with the fact of the "Park," and to whom he instructed a narrative of his life, and the custody of some objects of curiosity and mementoes of affection—among them a Bible of a very curious and costly design and workmanship. "That," said he, "was a present from Julia, upon our wedding day. I gave her one precisely like it. Take it—keep it for me, and if I should not survive the term of my imprisonment, send it to my mother in Leeds, with the undying love of her unhappy son." He was too agitated to say more, and sobbing a last adieu was soon on his way to Sing Sing. Up to the time of his final imprisonment he had no idea but that "his Julia," as he termed her, was the happy wife of an affectionate husband, enjoying life in its fullness in Old England.

On New Year's day the reporter above referred to, in going the rounds of "calls," visited the boarding house of Mrs. P., on Twenty-fourth street, and while there accidentally saw a Bible upon the center table, the very copy of the one he was visiting at the convict Shotwell. He took up the book, opened it, and upon the fly-leaf read these words: "Julia, from Thomas Leeds, England."

Here was a mystery, and just such an one as a reporter delights to contemplate and elucidate. So, calling the landlady one side, he asked her concerning the ownership of the book, explaining his curiosity by stating that he possessed one precisely like it, whose history was a peculiar one, and as he understood there were but two books of the same pattern in existence, he desired to know if these were the two exclusives. He was informed that the book was borrowed from a lady guest for adornment of the centre-table for this occasion; and when more was told that the owner would not probably object to an explanation of the coincidence. Sending up his card he was in the coincidence. Sending up his card he was in the coincidence. Sending up his card he was in the coincidence.

The reporter soon left, and it is unnecessary to state that his next calling-place was at the house of Mr. B., the agent of a well-known European banking firm in this city. The story of the "two Bibles" was soon told, and of course Mr. B. was deeply interested. He immediately called upon Mrs. P., and kindly and carefully made known to her the story of her husband's misfortune, accompanying the intelligence with such promises, if she desired it, that what was her answer? No, she did not know what her heart could doubt. She did desire it, and with heroic devotion she set about accomplishing it. In company with Mr. B., she visited the victimized merchants, the District Attorney, the Judge of the court and the jury, and telling the story of his and her wrongs, obtained letters from each to the Governor, soliciting the convict's pardon. Armed with these documents, she proceeded to Albany last week, and had an audience with Governor Morgan, the result of which was, that with a lighter heart and her husband's pardon she took the cars for Sing Sing, and on Monday she had the pleasure of forming a part of the prison doors in arms with the husband whom she had long mourned as lost to her forever. Your readers may surmise the rest, and if gifted with the power of prophecy may scan the future, but aside from telling the facts the reporter (your correspondent) sayeth not.
