bill at this time. The claim of the State upon this bond was $281,000. He showed her this claim was acquired, and contended that the Commonwealth could secure the last dollar of her indebtedness.

MR. WALLACE said that if this bill was a compromise, the State must stand in the same position as other creditors. But the company stood in the position of a fraudulent creditor.

MR. WALLACE called upon the supplement to the free banking law, which authorizes banking institutions to receive from the Auditor General the par value of the stock deposited in notes for circulation, and to deposit stocks to double the amount of their capital stock.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES. THURSDAY, March 12, 1863.

MR. BECK moved to reconsider the vote by which the House passed a bill relative to tonnage duties.

MR. BENDICT wished to extricate the original proposition from all entangling allusions.

MR. ALEXANDER should vote according to the dictates of his conscience, and repelled the insinuations which had been made that members had been unduly influenced.

MR. LABAR could not refrain from saying a word. Members on the floor had voted directly in opposition to the views which he had previously expressed.

MR. LABAR charged that Mr. ALEXANDER had made statements to this assistant sergeant-at-arms of a dubious character.

MR. ALEXANDER said that all he had done was to remark that if the Tyrone railroad was extended to Clarion county, he would have no objection to vote for the relief of some taxes.
