DISCONTINUABLE

We frequently see paragraphs in newspapers giving accounts of very large quantities of game having been killed by some individual in a day or two's shooting, and the feat is usually held up as one worthy of emulation.

To all genuine sportsmen, and to those who view the matter in its proper light, this seems a most detestable practice: No man should imagine, for an instant, that he will be thought any more of a sportsman, or receive credit for unusual skill as a shooter, by having his name inserted conspicuously on the perpetrator of such unnecessary and unwarrantable butchery.

It is, at least, a most un-sportsmanlike practice, and indicates those who indulge in it as unwilling to enjoy sport in a rational and proper manner. It should always be borne in mind that a sportsman is not proven by the number of birds he produces, but by the telling of his shots, and by his line.

He who walks three miles and kills eighteen birds out of twenty, in four hours, and comes home before noon, is entitled to far more credit than he who tramps all day and blunders down fifty wingtips, missing at every shot.

SCENES AT THE RAILWAY DEPOSITS.—Four passenger trains arrive at and depart from our rail road depot every day between half past twelve and one o'clock.

Another train arrives about eleven o'clock, and two others a little before four o'clock. Owing to the immense amount of travel on all the lines, and the changing of cars at this point, the scene at the depot is one of great bustle and activity.

Unexperienced travelers frequently become very much confused in the midst of the commotion, that necessarily prevails, and in many instances take wrong trains or are left behind. Citizens who find-up town life dull and monotonous will be greatly refreshed by a visit to the railway station about passenger train time.

Before doing so, however, they should see to the security of their pocket books, for the knucks still hover around that locality on the look-out for victims, and are only prevented from operating with their former success by the vigilance of officer Deeters, the faithful depot detective.

COMMEDIA.—A poor woman named Myers, with a child seven years old, who recently came from Germany, arrived here yesterday in a weary and destitute condition, having traveled on foot the entire distance from Philadelphia, sleeping in barns and subsisting upon the bounty of charitable people.

Mayer Reinfort, upon listening to the woman's touching story, furnished her with a note to superintendent Young, of the Pennsylvania railroad, stating her circumstances, and that humane officer at once provided herself and child with a free pass over the road to Pittsburg.

The Pennsylvania railroad company perform a great many similar deeds of charity in the course of every year. Appeals to their agents from the friendless and destitute who are known to be worthy objects of benevolence, are never made in vain.

This class of "dead heads" is very numerous. A DEER HUNTER.—About three o'clock yesterday morning officer Deeters arrested a stranger who had been looting about the depot for several nights previous.

When before Alderman Klins the man stated that he had seen better days, but having met with pecuniary reverses, resorted to the intoxicating bowl, and was now a homeless and friendless wanderer.

Declining to give his real name or former place of residence, the alderman committed him under the fictitious name of Edgar Thompson.

THE DAUPHIN COUNTY RECRUITS

A letter from a member of company H, of the 127th regiment, states that they do not expect to return home before the 20th instant.

The same letter notices the wounding of young Hummel, of this city, and further states that Colonel William Jennings was badly wounded, and that Lieut. J. B. Nisley, of Middletown, and one of his legs broken by a shell.

The letter alluded to was received in Middletown, as we learn from the Journal of yesterday afternoon. None of the relatives of Col. Jennings in this city have reliable intelligence similar to that contained in the Middletown letter.
