PENSIONS, BOUNTIES, BACK PAY, War Claims and Claims for Indemnity. STEWART, STEVENS, CLARK & CO., Attorneys and Counsellors-at-Law, and Solicitors for all kinds of Military Claims, 450 PENNSYLVANIA AVENUE, WASHINGTON, D. C.

This firm, having a thorough knowledge of the Pension Business, and being familiar with the practice in all the Departments of Government, believe that they can afford greater facilities to Pension, Bounty, and other claimants, for the prompt and successful accomplishment of business entrusted to them, than any other firm in Washington. They desire to secure such an amount of business as will enable them to execute the business in each department, not only throughout the States where such business may be had, but also with all the necessary blank forms of application and evidence, requisite to be filled up in accordance with the circulars distributed in their vicinity, with associated names inserted, and upon the due execution of the papers and transmission of the same to them by their local associates, they will promptly perform the business here.

Their charges will be ten dollars for officers and few dollars for privates for each Pension or Bounty and Back Pay obtained, and ten per cent. on amount of Claims for Military Supplies or Claims for Indemnity. Soldiers entitled to Pension or Bounty, who are disabled by disease or wounds, are entitled to Pensions. All soldiers who serve for two years, or during the war, should at once apply, and be entitled to $100 Bounty. Widows of soldiers who die or are killed, are entitled to Pensions, and the $100 Bounty. If there be no widow, the nearest next of kin, or the father, mother, sisters or brothers are entitled to the $100 Bounty and Back Pay.

Their stock will consist, in part, of Gentlemen's Fine Calf and Patent Leather Boots and Shoes, latest styles; Ladies' and Misses' Gaiters, and other goods in great variety; and in fact everything connected with the shoe business.

CUSTOMER WORK will be particularly attended to, and in all cases satisfaction is warranted. Lasts made up by one of the best makers in the country. Special attention given to the undershoeing, and their thorough knowledge of the business will, they trust, be sufficient guarantee to the public that they will do them justice, and furnish them an article that will recommend itself for utility, cheapness and durability. [Jan5] JACKSON & CO.

MURINGER'S PATENT BEEF TEA, A pure, concentrated extract of BEEF AND VEGETABLES. Convertible immediately into a nourishing and delicious soup. Highly approved by a number of eminent Physicians. Indispensable article condensed into a compact form, all the substantial and nutritive properties of a large bulk of meat and vegetables. The readiness with which it dissolves into a rich and palatable soup, which would require hours of preparation according to the usual method, is an advantage in many situations of life, too obvious to need mention. Its use is particularly recommended for the sick; while for those in health, it is a perfect substitute for fresh meat and vegetables. It will keep in any climate.

It is peculiarly well adapted FOR TRAVELERS, by land or sea, who can thus avoid those accidental deprivations of food, owing to the fact, to which they are so liable. FOR INVALIDS, whose capricious appetite can thus be satisfied in a moment. FOR SPORTSMEN AND EXHIBITIONISTS, to whom, both its compactness and easy preparation will recommend it. For sale by WM. It is a most valuable work, and is a most interesting and useful one. It is a most valuable work, and is a most interesting and useful one."

THE ASSAULT ON THE LEFT. On the left Gen. McClelland commenced the assault earlier than any other commander. The first advance was made by McClelland's corps, commanded by Col. Landrum and Gen. Burbridge. As early as 11 o'clock, Landrum's men took a fort, and were in actual possession of it. Gen. Osterhaus, on their left, made a breach on the south side of the work, with his artillery. There were two companies of rebel soldiers in it at the time—one of them ran away, and the other actually burrowed their way through the earth to our men in front, and surrendered as prisoners. Landrum, on obtaining possession of the fort, put a pioneer force at work to throw up earthworks in the center of the fort. In constructing the fortifications, the rebels left the rear of all the forts open, to give them an opportunity to assail our men, in the event of our success in driving them out. The flags of the 48th Ohio, 77th Illinois, and 19th Kentucky, floated from the inner slope of the parapet, from half-past seven o'clock a. m., till four p. m. At the latter hour, the rebels were seen preparing for a charge to retake the fort. An entire brigade was about to be pitted against a few companies. Our men did not receive the support which had been promised them, and were compelled to fall back, leaving the enemy again in possession of the fort. The 48th Ohio acquitted itself very creditably in the affair. The conduct of its officers and men is highly spoken of. I enclose a list of the casualties of the regiment. Between twelve and one o'clock the 16th Indiana, after a desperate charge, succeeded in capturing a fort to the right of the one in possession of Colonel Landrum. They held it gallantly against a determined assault, until relieved by the 48th Indiana, from whom it was taken by a superior force of the enemy.

The assault on the right was commenced soon after ten o'clock by Gen. Taylor's brigade, consisting of the 9th, 4th, 20th and 30th Iowa regiments. The 4th of this command marched forward heroically,

FRIDAY MORNING, JUNE 5 1863. SIEGE OF VICKSBURG. GENERAL ASSAULT ON THE TWENTY SECOND GRAPHIC ACCOUNT OF THE ATTACK.

We clip the following account of the assault on the rebel fortifications of Vicksburg from the Cincinnati Commercial. It is a very full and graphic description of the bravery of our soldiers: The events of the 19th, 20th and 21st had wearied us all and disappointed most of us. No army was ever more confident of achieving a glorious success than was ours of entering Vicksburg on the 19th. So fully assured were we of victory, that we postponed it from day to day.

It became known on the morning of the 21st that at 10 o'clock next morning the whole line of the enemy's works would be assaulted, and I did not hear of a single doubt being expressed as to the result. "To storm the works is to take Vicksburg," was the universal opinion among both officers and men.

THE ENEMY'S STRONGEST POINT. Gen. Grant was of opinion that the key to Vicksburg was in front of Gen. M'Pherson's corps—the centre of the rebel lines. There are a number of forts there, the two principal ones commanding the main road to Jackson, and directly in the rear of Vicksburg court House. To silence the guns here several of our best batteries were ordered into position—among them three Parrott guns, manned and officered by the 1st regulars. Between our sharpshooters and our artillery, we silenced the guns in these forts, but, as we afterwards learned, that damaged the rebels only a little. Our shells set fire to a number of cotton bales in front of the fort.

THE ASSAULT ON THE CENTRE. The assault was to have been made all along the lines at 10 o'clock a. m. The order was not obeyed, I think, by a single division of the army. At the appointed time, our lines occupied exactly the position assigned them on the previous day, and up to eleven o'clock the skirmishers had not advanced, save those of one or two divisions. On the centre, the 1st and 3d brigades of General Logan's division, commanded by Generals John E. Smith and John D. Stevenson, advanced at about half past eleven o'clock. Two regiments of Stevenson's brigade were pitted with the 1st of the 4th Missouri, and had no opportunity to meet them, being driven back before reaching the rifle-pits. Logan's men went forward bravely, but were met by overwhelming numbers of the entrenched foe. Hundreds of them jumped into the ditches, but the number that reached the parapet was small—Nearly two companies rushed into the fort and were captured. The flag of the 7th Missouri was shot down, and the general advance ceased. The 2d Missouri, commanded by Gen. A. J. Smith, was shot through the head while gallantly leading his regiment in the assault. The 2d Missouri, commanded by Gen. A. J. Smith, was shot through the head while gallantly leading his regiment in the assault.

POWER OF IMAGINATION. The sweet influence of faith and hope was scarcely ever known more remarkably than in some imaginative medical practice of the Prince of Orange, of the siege of Breda, in 1625. That city, long besieged, had suffered all the miseries that constant fatigue, anxiety, and bad provisions could bring upon its inhabitants. The survey broke out and carried off great numbers. This, the seeming helplessness of the defence, disposed the garrison to surrender; but the Prince of Orange, not willing to lose the place, but unable to retain it, contrived to send letters to the soldiers, promising them speedy assistance, and sending pretended medicines against the survey, said to be of great price, and still greater efficacy.

CHEERFULNESS IN WAR. The small trials were given to each physician, and it was said that three drops were sufficient to give a healing efficacy to a gallon of water. Not even were the commanders let into the secret. The soldiers and people flocked around the physicians in crowds. Cheerfulness was upon every countenance. Many of the sick were speedily and perfectly recovered. Such as had not moved their limbs for a month before, were seen to walk, with their limbs straight, sound, and whole, boasting their cure by the Prince of Orange's remedy.

When we have such facts as these, how are we to discuss or examine the pretensions of any medicine or medical system? And the experience of almost every person can furnish facts of a similar extraordinary character. For example, the heads are covered with warts. You try acids, caustic, and the actual cautery, but with no benefit. The old ones grow out again, and new ones are coming. They are uncomfortable and hideous, and you are in despair.

Some day a stranger offers, for a sixpence, to send these warts all away. He counts ten, and writes the number on a slip of paper which he puts in his pocket, and you see him no more. In a fortnight all the warts, new and old big and little, have disappeared, and never again return—perhaps he annotated the paper or was it the expectation of a cure? You had faith enough to give the sixpence, which you were assured was a mere formality. As to expecting a cure, you probably quite forgot it, until, one day, the annoying excrescences were gone.

A friend of the present writer, an artist and a man of business, had an attack of fever and ague, which, for several months, baffled all the ordinary means of cure. Some one told him of an old German, who had cured many cases, and at last, out of annoyance and curiosity, he went to see him. It is hard to say whether he had faith or hope in the old German; but he knocked at his cabin door. "Goom in," grunted Mien Heer. Our friend entered.

"Ah! you got der chills and fever," said the old fellow, without moving from his chimney-corner. "Well, you can go—you won't have dem any more." He went, as he was bid, and did not have another fit of ague. There could scarcely be a cheaper or less troublesome cure; but it is not easily or plausibly accounted for.

GEN. HOOKER'S VALUE IN THE WORLD OF COMMERCE.—The London Shipping Gazette, May 16th, says: "The selection of Gen. Hooker for the recent very hazardous enterprise was not a fortunate one. The antecedents of that individual, whether in this country or in America are not of a nature to inspire confidence, and it is but a small satisfaction to his patrons at Washington that they who know Gen. Hooker best are not disappointed in the man or in his performance."

[We don't exactly understand what this means—but it evidently means something.]

The Patriot & Union.

FRIDAY MORNING, JUNE 5 1863. SIEGE OF VICKSBURG. GENERAL ASSAULT ON THE TWENTY SECOND GRAPHIC ACCOUNT OF THE ATTACK.

under the leadership of Thayer. The assault was made by them at a terrible cost; but the promised succor did not arrive, and the prize had to be abandoned, when it could have been saved, had an equal spirit of courage and bravery been displayed by those from whom support was expected.

General Blair on the left of the right wing, moved his men forward for the bloody work soon after its commencement by Steele. A volunteer storming party of one hundred and fifty men—ten from each regiment in the division—went up to the enemy's works, crossed the ditch, and climbed the parapet. The rebels were, for a time, afraid to show their heads above the rifle-pits long enough at a time to fire at this little band of valiant soldiers.

The storming party looked in vain for the support which had been promised it. The brigade which had been ordered to follow it hesitated. Finally all but one of the hundred and fifty got discouraged and sought the shelter of a deep ravine. William Trogden, a private of Company B, 8th Missouri, refused to retrace a single step. He was color bearer of the storming party. When his comrades left him, he dug a hole in the ground with his bayonet, planted his flag-staff in it, within twenty yards of the enemy's rifle-pits, and sat down by the side of his banner, where he remained all day. Blair's men finally made a charge, but were repulsed with terrible loss.

Gen. Tuttle's division joined in the assault on the right, but shared the fate which befell the others—was repulsed. I have attempted no lengthened description of the carnage near Vicksburg on the 22d, for the reason that nothing occurred during the day a description of which would be more interesting because more detailed. It was nothing more than a single charge of the enemy's works, which should have been simultaneous, but was not. It was unsuccessful and disastrous, whether from bad management or disobedience of orders on the part of those to whom high commands were entrusted, or from the dreadful character of the work to be performed, I will not attempt to decide. There appears to have been a want of co-operation between subordinate and superior officers and commands. Storming parties went gallantly forward, but were left to perish for want of support. Regiments and brigades advanced nobly, but only to be disappointed in their expectations of receiving succor and help.

The result of the battle had been disastrous to us in the loss of nearly 2,000 brave men. We have lost no ground and the army is not demoralized, by its recent failure to take the strongest fortified position in the South. The rebels, no doubt, feel encouraged by their success in keeping us from their works, and this feeling may operate against us in dispelling the gloom and despondency which could not but prevail in an army routed for the fifth successive time, as the rebels were at Big Black river.

OUR LOSS. A correct estimate of our loss on the 22d will place the figures at 2,500 killed and wounded. It is impossible to get an accurate statement so soon after the engagement. I find a disposition on the part of every command to exaggerate. At several division hospitals I heard yesterday of a 1,000 killed and wounded, when less than 200 would cover their loss. Our loss on the 22d was much less than at Champion Hill on the 30th, but includes a large number of our company officers, from the fact that the rebels at Vicksburg had a chance to "pick their men," which they did not have to such an extent on the 16th, when they had to meet us on more equal terms. Under cover of a breastwork there was nothing to hinder the rebels from selecting the leaders of our infantry columns as they marched up in face of their deadly fire.

The rebel loss was trifling, how much I cannot say, but probably less than one-fourth of our own. Two companies of the 7th Missouri were taken prisoners. This includes all of our captured, I believe, except those of our wounded who fell into their hands on the fortifications.

THE ASSAULT ON THE LEFT. On the left Gen. McClelland commenced the assault earlier than any other commander. The first advance was made by McClelland's corps, commanded by Col. Landrum and Gen. Burbridge. As early as 11 o'clock, Landrum's men took a fort, and were in actual possession of it. Gen. Osterhaus, on their left, made a breach on the south side of the work, with his artillery.
