AGRICULTURE.

THE CAUSE OF INFERIOR STOCK.

Some farmers sell or slaughter their best stock of mares, cows, ewes or sows, and thus cut off all hope of any improvement at one blow. Does a heifer show a disposition to fatten easily? She is encouraged to feed until fat, and is then sold and eaten, while her fellows, who belong to the same breed with Pharoah's leamkine, are kept for milk or rearing calves, because they are not and cannot be made fat for the butcher. Has a farmer a sow pig which becomes fat upon the feed on which the rest of his pigs are starving? He gives her over to the butcher's knife and propagates from "land shads" and corn oribs.

Has he a fine, round, bright-eyed ewe? She will be fat about the time his half filled pork barrels are empty and she is, stripped of her fair skin and fair proportious simply because she is worth the trouble of killing; and thus many of our farmers perpetuate a breed of animals that are a disgrace to the country. They seem uneasy while they possess an animal that will draw the attention of their neighbors or the butchers, and woe be to it if it put on a better appearance than its fellows, for from that time its doom is sealed.

To improve the breed of animals, it is by no means necessary to incur a great expense in bringing animals from a distance. If a farmer will mount his horse and ride across the country some fine day, and view the live stock of his neighbors, he will soon perceive that there are abundant means of bettering his circumstances by a cross or exchange, at a slight cost, and he by this plan is improving his judgment by comparison, and hoarding up experience for a future day that will be of more value to him than the expense of many such excursions; and improvement once begun and persisted in for a short time. will produce such a corresponding improvement in the mind and circumstances of the farmer as will insure its continuation, and richly reward all his labor and outlay.

Many of our farmers destroy the hope of improving their stock by a system of false economy in the selection of the males from which they breed their stock; many do not keep a male from which to breed their horses or horned stock, nor is it necessary, as one will do for a neighborhood; but this one should be the best; and in order to keep a good one, a good price must and should be charged for his

Many farmers lose thirty and even fifty dollars in the value of a full grown horse, steer, ox or cow, by a system of false economy-by not being willing to pay two or three dollars more for the services of a male. I have repeatedly driven my cows three miles to a good male, at a cost of four or five dollars, when I could have found a male on my neighbor's farm, at a cost of twenty-five cents. About three weeks ago I sold a five year old colt for $180, when colts of the same age could be bought for from $140 to $150, and can only attribute the extra price to the additional expense of five dollars in the choice of a male. -Germantown Telegraph.

PRUNING FRUIT TREES.

In the last Prairie Farmer we find some excellent suggestions on the subject of pruning fruit trees, by J. T. Elliott, of Grand Rapids, Mich. They accord exactly with what we have said over and over again for many years in these column. His communication is dated May, and he begins thus: "The season for trimming fruit trees is approaching," and then goes on as follows:

"We sil remember the old apple and pear trees, where (New En land) we had to be boosted to reach the lower branches; and coming out here, we have imitated our fathers' follies, and fared worse than they. They pruned in February and March, and we have known no better. Letting go any discussions of what their interests may be-and looking at home—all experience I hope will not be lost on us, and that experience, all points one way. scars to heal quick and sound. Say in June. "Begin your business while the tree is young, and don't be sparing of your knife. Take off all bearing branches that will ever need it, and thus says the taking of them off when they get large. This being properly cone when young, will save much labor and loss in after years. - We are spt to leave on too many

"Limbs that grow close together, and parallel, and that cross, must have one of them removed. The formation of crotches must be avoided, or else we loss more or less of trees by splitting down when they get to bearing. If practical, establish a leading branch, and grow laterals at intervals. Some will need little, and other sorts much cutting."

Mr. Elliott also advises to grow heads low, with the lower branches not over two feet, if possible from the ground. They stand the high winds better, are handsomer, and the fruit is more easily govat. If the plow cannot approach the tree in consequence of this system of growing, so much the better, as a plow never ought to get near any fruit tree. All this is sound doctrine. Low-branched trees also protect their trunks against the sun of summer, which sometimes is very injurious, as well as, to a certain extent, against, the freezing and thawing process of winter.

There is a marked difference between the amputated limbs of trees that have been operated on respectively in February and June or July. The first often show, especially where the limbs are of any considerable size, a black stump, which never changes except to decay: while those of the latter readily heel over, and present a neat appearance. Besides, summer pruning insures fruit buds, while spring pruming gives us only wood.

MORE: ABOUT, CUTTINGS

In a discussion by the Horticultural Society of Michigan, recently, the fellowing suggestions were made by one of the experienced S O L A R M A T C H E S ! nursery-men, present, which we reprint for the benefit of those not well posted in these

Rose cuttings generally, are most sure to grow, immediately after the flowering is over for the month. Geraniums grow at any season, also fuschias, verbenas, and other similar growing plants. Difficult woody plants require to have the new wood from which the cuttings are taken, well ripened to insure growth. Pink pipings may be cut at any season. Generally speaking all plants grow more readily just after blooming, and the best cuttings are taken from those shoots that have borne blooms. Usually it is well to leave a small part of the past year's growth on the cuttings. Fuschias grow best from young shoots, atso heliotropes and verbenas. Oleanders need to be rooted in water previous to planting in the earth; the roots are tender, and should be handled with care. Cactus require drying for a number of days before planting; tuose leaves that have flower buds, are said to bloom early, and also to continue flowering anually.

Herbarcous plants root sooner when the stems are placed in water for a day. Equality of temperature and moisture is important to insure success. For this purpose glasses are placed over delicate cuttings; some prefer clear, others green glass. Cuttings generally require partial shading, until roots form. Th soil should be firmly pressed to the lowest point of the about, that the air may not penetrate and dry the embryo roots. Cutting, like the dew and moonlight, therefore the coverings of those places in hot-beds should be removed, if the weather is moderate at sunset The horizontalebranches; nearest the ground are much more apt to form roots than the upright ones.
