A SUBSTITUTE REFUSED .- The draft gives rise to some novel incidents, of which we give an example. A man, who shall be nameless, was drafted. His wife was sorely distressed at the bare idea of parting, and was vainly endeavoring to invent some excuse for getting him exempted, when a knock was heard at her door. On opening the door she found a rather rough-looking chap, who accosted her thus:
"Madam, I hear your husband has been drafted." "Yes, sir," she replied, "he has; but goodness knows how I am to spare him."— "Well, ma'am, I've come to offer my services as a substitute for him." "A what?" asks the now excited lady. "I wish to take his place," answers the man. "You—you take the place of my husband, you vagabond! I'll teach you to insult a poor lone woman in distress, you mean, dirty wretch," cried the prospective widow accompanying her remarks with a discharge of dirty water at the head of the astonished substitute who fled hastily down the stairs, just in time to escape the pail which followed the water. The last heard of him he was flying into a recruiting office on Asylum street, where he thought of enlisting, as a private, rather than venture again to offer his services as a "substitute," which he now believes to be a more trying and delicate relation than that of Artemus Ward's "episodes."-Hartford

COOLNESS OF OUR SOLDIERS UNDER FIRE History is full of anecdotes of the remarkable nerve and indifference displayed by soldiers of different nations when under fire. It is to be hoped that the future historian of the present war will not omit to chronicle, among other incidents, the following paragraph illustrative of the qualities referred to: "We asked an officer if the loss of lite has been great from rebel shell. 'No,' said he, we take them as a joke; there will be one along directly and you can see. What time is it, Ben? Just fifteen minutes since the last—the time is up—here she es-hello, old fellow!' Splas shell buried itself, exploding in the ground, throwing the dirt over the tent, and some of the pieces failing within reach of us-the hole only twenty feet from the door. They laughed heartily, why, we could not tell; it was snything but amusing to us. We were about to bid them good day, when they kindly invited us to stay and see another. It will not be long gendemen, there will be another in fifteen minutes; don't hurry.' We did not see it in that light, and sped on our adventurous way. Had the ground been hard or rocky, the shell would in all probability have exploded on the surface, and there would have been two en-
