

From the Courier & Enquirer, March 27.
The Interview Between Gen. Taylor and Gen. Scott.

"On Sunday, the 18th inst., President Taylor saw General Scott in the Rev. Mr. Pine's church, and not having met with the General since the Mexican war, determined to evince by his reception of him that he bore no malice for what had occurred—that however much he may have felt at the time, the mode and manner of taking from him all his regular troops, he was willing to forget it.

Accordingly he met Gen. Scott, after the congregation was dismissed, in the most friendly manner—shook him cordially by the hand, and evinced a degree of pleasure at the meeting which could only have been demonstrated in a stronger manner by publicly embracing! That, he did not think was called for. The interview in presence of the congregation, terminated by the President inviting General Scott to call upon him.

On the following day General Scott called at the President's and sent up his card. Two gentlemen were with the President when it was received; and, instead of inviting General Scott to come to him in his office, which is up-stairs, he promptly sent a message to the General, inviting him to go into his private parlor below, when he would join him with the least possible delay. Within five minutes he dismissed the gentlemen with him, and went down stairs to receive General Scott. He did not find him in the parlor, and enquired of the porter where he was. To this enquiry he received for answer, that immediately on receiving the message from the President, General Scott got into his carriage and drove away! On Wednesday, he left the city without seeing, or making another attempt to see, the President.

These are the facts of the case. I vouch for their accuracy, and wish them published without commentary. Very possibly, General Scott did not precisely understand the message sent to him; but if so, it was his duty, after his reception on Sunday, and after being specially invited to call, to take the necessary means to arrive at the fact. It was not for him to assume that there was unnecessary delay in his reception; and least of all, is there in the facts as stated, and which I know to be facts, the slightest grounds for the charges in circulation, that the President has exhibited towards General Scott a want of courtesy.

Another account, "by a reliable person."
 [From the Courier & Enquirer, March 28.]

The President and Gen. Scott.

The annexed reply to the article in this paper, yesterday morning, referring to these two distinguished persons, comes to us under the signature of a perfectly reliable and responsible person. Reluctant, however, unnecessarily to obtrude names on the public, we withhold this signature, only adding, what indeed may seem superfluous, that the communication is not from General Scott.

"Having seen a statement in the Courier and Enquirer, of this morning, which purports to give the facts connected with Gen. Scott's late visit to Washington, and having been in the way of seeing and knowing what occurred during that visit, I beg you will publish the following, to correct the errors in which Colonel Webb has fallen.

"Gen. Scott reached Washington on the evening of the 13th inst., and on the 14th inst., he had, about the 2d inst., despatched to the Adjutant General, at Washington, expressing his intention to be there about that time, for the purpose of paying his respects in person to the new President of the United States, and to learn of the Secretary of War the military views of the latter, in connection with General Scott's position.

"On the morning of the 14th, Gen. Scott called to make his respects to the President; but learning at the door, from the porter, that the President was engaged, he left his card, saying that he would call again; meaning, when the press of business upon the President should be less—General Scott himself having no business to transact with the President, except such as every rule of official propriety required should pass through the Secretary of War.

"General Scott did not, at the President's door, nor anywhere else when in Washington, receive any message whatever from the President.

"Gen. Scott, after leaving his card at the President's house, drove to the war office, where he had official business which could only be transacted with, or through, the secretary.

"The meeting at the church took place on the Sunday subsequent to the day upon the President, under the following circumstances—

"Gen. Scott being nearest to the door, was the first out of the church, and he there waited some minutes for the President, and advanced to meet him, and accosted him with civility and courtesy. The salutation was reciprocated. General Scott said he had not pressed himself upon the President, but had waited, or should wait, before repeating his call, for a period of some relaxation of the President's business. The reply to this was courteous; and if Gen. Scott did not again call, it was because, as the Secretary of War knows, public duty required that he should leave Washington earlier than he had first expected.

"Gen. Scott has not spoken or complained of any want of courtesy towards him on the part of the President on this occasion, and it is to be regretted that any rumor of this character should have been deemed of sufficient importance to be brought before the public.

"It is scarcely necessary to say that any paper which may have published the original statement should also copy this."

Canadian Annexation.

The newspapers of Canada are actively canvassing the merits of annexation to the United States, as a remedy for their present trouble. The Montreal Witness states its view of the case thus:—

1st—Annexation would probably make all our institutions and magistrates elective.

2d—It would do away with all custom-houses and smuggling along our very extended frontier, and establish free trade with the North American Continent.

3d—It would introduce the system of direct taxation for all the expenses of our own government.

4—It would introduce the American currency of dollars and cents, and the American postage system would be immediately extended over Canada.

5th—It would introduce American capital freely into Canada, to erect factories, carry on manufactures, and purchase the produce of the soil; but we would lose all remaining advantages in Britain.

6th—It would raise the value of fixed property in Canada to a par with property similar circumstances on the other side of the lines.

7th—It would greatly promote the construction of railroads in Canada, and especially that of the Niagara and Detroit River Railroad, which the Eastern States very much need as a connecting link with the West.

8th—It would probably cause a great part of the produce of the West to flow down the St. Lawrence.

9th—It would deprive us of the whole expenditure of the British military, naval commissariat and ordnance departments in Canada.

10th—It would immediately subject us to the American tariff on imported goods, which is in many respects much higher than our own.

11th—The money thus raised by duties on our imports, would be taken to Washington to be spent there, perhaps in annexing the rest of Mexico, with a view to extending the area of slavery, of Cuba, with a view to increase the slave power.

Religious and Moral Considerations.

1st—The annexation would, we presume, sweep away the title system at once from Lower Canada.

2d—It would go far to settle the Clergy and College questions in a very summary manner.

3d—It would entirely prevent all legislation for the endowment of any religious denomination, however strong, such legislation being at variance with the Constitution of the United States.

4d—It would give the non-slaveholding interest such an overwhelming majority in Congress, as in all probability greatly to hasten the overthrow of the system of slavery itself in the United States.

5—It would do away with all fear of our becoming involved in a war with the United States.

6d—It would remove us effectually from the fostering care of British religious and benevolent societies.

7th—It would introduce us at once to the sympathies and aid of the American societies of the same kind. Their Tract Society, for instance, would probably send colonizers immediately into Canada; their Home Missionary Society pastors, and their education societies teachers.

8th—It would expose runaway slaves to be caught and taken back to their former masters if the slave-catchers durst venture on the experiments.

9—It would involve us in the guilt and odium of having slavery and the slave-trade sanctioned by our national legislature at the seat of government, where it has sole and undoubted control; as well as in all such discreditable diplomacy as that recently carried on respecting Oregon, Texas and Mexico.

The following view of the case is expressive of the feelings of the French Canadians.

It is from "L'Avenir," the organ of Lafontaine.

"LA NATIONALITE.—We inhabit that section of Canada formerly called Lower Canada. In that portion of New France we count 800,000 souls of French origin.

"We form a nation, small if you will, but still a nation. We have a language, a religion, and laws all French. Our customs, our habits, are those of France, not of England. We have our cities, our country, our churches, our colleges, our priests, our advocates, our notaries, all French, and we have our motto, "Nos institutions, notre langue, et nos loix." All these we have inherited from France. By treaty of cession, England is bound, obliged, to guaranty and preserve to us these institutions, which form the groundwork of our nationality.

"They have, by an act worthy of Nicholas of Russia, crushed the French population which is the majority, under the English population, which is the minority. They have given us many representatives to Upper Canada and Lower Canada, well knowing that the English representatives of Lower Canada for the sake (as is so fully exemplified at present!) our institutions, then no longer enjoy the guaranty that England promised them by the treaty. We are left at the mercy of our political and religious enemies. The treaty is then violated, or, at least, on the eve of being so. We are no longer subjects of England: we are placed under the denomination of a set of our fellow subjects. And we should be justified in demanding, if not the intervention, at least the mediation of France, who was a party to the treaty.

"The United States, far from extinguishing in our hearts the sacred fire of nationalite, would puff it into a blaze; for they know well that, confiding the safety of the Saint Lawrence to the French of Canada, it would be as well guarded as was New Orleans by the French of Louisiana. The enemy might get in, but he never could get out."

Apple Orchards.

We are glad to notice, that we are getting the right class of men to take hold of apple orchards. The subject is becoming reduced to a science; and a man who does not make his trees grow rapidly and produce abundantly, may possibly pass for a worthy, honest man, if not otherwise disqualified for the title, but he must be put down as a great ignoramus, and a most negligent slovenly manager; so far, at least, as the subject of fruit is concerned.

People who pay attention to their fruit trees are sure to make them bear. We have a glorious fruit soil and climate, the best on the face of the globe, and we ought to produce it in such quantities that every household should be profusely supplied with the choicest varieties throughout the year. The best may be as easily raised as the worst, as the trees of such are not unfrequently the very greatest bearers.

Shrewd men, who raise fruit for sale, now generally select one two, or at most three or four kinds, which are of standard demand in market, good yielders, and proved to grow in perfection where cultivated, and confine themselves entirely to these. They see that they are properly manured the land properly cultivated among them, properly trimmed, and properly managed in every particular, and they are sure to find an abundant supply of choice fruit on their trees in autumn.

A gentleman within our knowledge, has a small orchard on the Hudson river, of less than seven acres, which produces from $500 to $750 worth of apples annually. This is not one year of plenty and another of two of famine, but is a steady regular average yield. This man does not have, what we hear often, called by haphazard farmers bearing years, or rather he has no other. And all this is secured by the simplest process, viz: good management. He scrapes the trunks of his trees every year, and immediately and before the insects and their larva can find a hiding place when thus exposed, he gives them a thorough drenching of wood ashes and hot water, as thick as can be made to run freely from a whitewash brush. This practice, with lime added occasionally about the roots at the trunk, with the management we have before indicated, gives the satisfactory results we have mentioned. After carefully hand picking his apples he heads them up in barrels with a few auger holes in each end, which are then thrown upon their blige, or sides, are allowed to remain exposed to the weather under the trees, till the danger of freezing, when they are housed, if not previously sold. We would commend this process of fruit culture to all fruit growers as worthy of experiment and trial.

Low-Priced Broadcloths.—The Dry Goods Reporter

says by the last steamer we received samples of the German Wools and the prices current at that date. Comparison with American Wool shows that if it requires two pounds to make a yard of Broadcloth, and the cost for weaving is 45 cents, the present tariff is sufficient to enable the American to compete successfully with the German manufacturer.

Canadian Exports.—It appears from a statement submitted in the Canadian Parliament, that the total value of exports from Canada to the U. States, during the year 1848, to be $8,089,829. During the same period, the value of exports from Quebec and Montreal was $0,984,670, making a total of Canadian exports of $10,074,500.
