TWENTY SEVEN PERSONS KILLED ! FORTY WOUNDED!

We extract the following account of the fearful riot which occurred in New York on Thursday night, the 10th instant, at the Astor Place Opera House, from the Tribune of the 11th instant.

We are again called upon to record one of the most shameful events which has ever disgraced the history of our city. The riot of Monday night, was but a continuation, was harmless in comparison. We give the particulars in the order of their occurrence, and almost entirely from our own personal observation.

In anticipation of a riot, the rush for tickets was very great, and before night, none were to be had. For some time before the came upon the ground, at half-past seven, the square and street from Broadway to the Bowery were nearly full. There was such a tremendous crush about the doors, in spite of a notice posted up stating that the tickets were all sold, that several of the entrances were obliged to be closed. The Police used every exertion to preserve order, and succeeded in preventing all attempts to force an Inside, the house was filled but entrance. not crowded, and the amphitheater was not more than half full. The general appearance of the audience was respectable, and it ( was hoped at first that there would be no groups of people came along, bearing away in which event we would have to rely upon ed, however, that the windows had been carefully boarded up, and the doors barricaded, the object of which was afterwards made manifest.

The first two scenes passed over with a vociferous welcome to Mr. Clarke as Alulcolm. The entrance of Mr. Macready, in the third act, was the signal for a perfect storm of cheers, groans and hisses. The whole audience rose, and the nine-tenths of it who were friendly to Macready cheered, waving their hats and handkerchiefs. A large body in the parquette, with others in the second tier and amphitheater, hissed and groaned with equal zeal. The tumult lasted for ten or fifteen minutes, when an attempt was made to restore order by a board being brought upon the stage, upon which was written "The friends of Order will remain This silenced "all but the rioters, quiet." who continued to drown all sound of what was said upon the stage. Not a word of the first act could be heard by any one in the house. The Policemen present did little or nothing, evidently waiting orders. Finally, in the fast scene of the act, Mr. Matsell, Chief of Police, made his appearance in the parquette, and, followed by a number of his aids, marched directly down the aisle to the leader of the disturbance, whom he secured after a short but violent struggle. One by one the rioters were taken and carried out, the greater part of the audience applauding as they disappeared.

Before the second act was over, something of the play could be heard, and in the pauses never to roturn ; yet still the excitement continues, and the house remained in possession of the shouts and yells, the orders of the of the military, while meetings denunciato-Chief and his men in different parts of the ry of the military were being held in varihouse could be heard, as well as the wild ous parts of the city. STILL LATER.-Twenty-seven persons have been killed and an equal number wounded, who were conveyed to the hospital, station house &c. ; but besides these, many were conveyed to their own homes. The whole occurrence is to be deplored, and this last ' learful tragedy, must bring upon New York, a time-enduring stain of infamy.
