

would possibly be spared from Vienna were immediately despatched by railway to Presburg, and it is said that many of the soldiers who were raw recruits, left with very great discouragement and reluctance to march.

A continued battle on the 23d, 24th, and 25th ult., took place between the Russians and Hungarians, near Miskolc, on the left bank of the Sajo. It seems that, after the battle, Georgy quitted his position, and the Russians, a good deal cut up, followed him.

The above is all of the Caledonia's news that have been received in New York to the time the Mail Pilot Line left, at 4 1/2 o'clock in the afternoon. Both the Telegraph lines between this city and New York were more or less injured by the storm of yesterday afternoon and evening, and were consequently prevented from working, which will account for our not giving this morning our usual full despatch of the foreign news, by express and telegraph from Halifax.

Mazzini's Proclamation.

We translate for The Tribune Mazzini's admirable Proclamation to the Romans:

In the name of God and the people, oh Romans! Brute force has subdued our city, but in no respect has changed or diminished our rights. The Roman Republic will live eternally in the hearts of the free men who have proclaimed it, little spontaneous adhesion of all the enemies of the State, in the faith of nations who have looked with admiration on our protracted defence, and in the blood of martyrs who have died for it beneath our walls, permit the invaders to violate their solemn promises. God will not betray his own. Submit with firmness and constancy to the trial which He has sent upon you for a short time, and do not doubt the future. Violence has but a short duration, and triumph is certain to the nation which hopes, and combats and suffers, for the holy cause of justice and liberty. You have given brilliant proofs of your military courage; now show your civil courage. By all that you hold sacred, fellow-citizens, keep yourselves free from all cowardly fear from all base selfishness. Let the whole world ever see the distance between you and your invaders. Rome may be their camp, but let it not be their city. Look upon us as a traitor, who, in violation of his conscience, passes from your city to the camp of the enemy. The European powers can never consent to Rome becoming the conquest of the French, or any other nation.

Maintain, then, this occupation in its character of a conquest; isolate the enemy, and Europe will not hesitate to raise its powerful voice in your favor. No one can prevent the pacific expression of your wishes, organized then publicly, their manifestations. Let your municipalities repeat with calmness and firmness, that they adhere from choice to the Republican form, and to the abolition of the temporal Government of the Pope, and that they regard all governments as illegal which have not been freely approved by the people. From every quarter, from every city, let lists covered with countless names attest the same belief, and appeal to the same right. In the streets, in the theatres, in all public places, let this cry be unceasingly heard, "No more Governments of Priests." "Long live free suffrage." All who have taken the oath to the Republic ought to leave their functions wherever the Pontifical standards are raised.

A whole people cannot be imprisoned. Men cannot be forced to their own degradation. You will degrade yourselves, Oh Romans, if after having announced to Europe that you wished to be free, after having fought for liberty, and lost thousands of your brethren, you yield yourselves to slavery, and compromise, so to say, with defeat.

Romans, your fathers were great, not so much because they knew how to conquer as because they never despaired in public calamities. In the name of God and the people, be great like your fathers. Now, as then, you have to guard a world—the Italian world.

Your assembly is not dissolved. Your Triumphs, although their public acclamations have been suspended by brutal force, were only for the suitable moment, to exercise a new law.

AUSTRIA AND HUNGARY.

The accounts from Vienna are of much interest. The accounts of the entrance of the Hungarians from Comorn into Raab, have been fully confirmed: and they only differ as to the extent of the booty which was secured in and near Raab by the Magyars. One estimate, and that about the highest one, says that they captured 4000 oxen, 50,000 uniforms, a very large quantity of flour, corn, and gunpowder: some copper money, and eleven pieces of artillery; and that they also made a battalion of Italian foot prisoners. Another account speaks of a still greater number of guns being taken, but other statements estimate at a very much lower amount the Austrian loss, in stores, artillery, and prisoners.

The greatest alarm was excited in Vienna and Presburg by the news of the advance of the Hungarians, whose outposts are said to have appeared in Wieselburg. All the troops which could possibly be spared from Vienna were immediately despatched by railway to Presburg, and it is said that many of the soldiers who were raw recruits, displayed very great discouragement and reluctance to march. Most accounts state that it was the garrison of Comorn under Klappa which made the advance on Raab, but it has been asserted that the Hungarian general, Aulich, who had been rumored, truly or untruly, to have been near the Platten Sea with a considerable corps, moved on Raab, and there joined the corps from Comorn. It is uncertain whether the Magyars have remained at Raab, though it seems more probable that they have.

According to accounts in the Hamburg Borzenhulle, dated from Vienna on the 8th, authentic intelligence of events between Raab and Comorn was still wanting. The post between Vienna and Pesth was interrupted, and no letters had arrived from Raab. Letters from Wieselburg, of the day before, stated that the insurgents were still in Raab, and had pushed their outposts to beyond Hochstrasse. The reinforcements from Vienna, Moravia, and Bohemia, consisted of 16 battalions. It was reported that the Hungarians had entered Szered, on the Wang.

The Soldatenfreund gives the following important intelligence concerning the operations of Prince Paskiewitch, dated from Debreczin, on the 2d inst:

"Field Marshall Paskiewitch, having heard that it was the intention of Georgy to make a stand against General Grabbe, behind the Sajo, ordered the 4th corps to advance from Mezo Kovard to Miskolc, with the commission to form a junction with Grabbe and drive Georgy behind the Theiss. In order to support these operations, the field-marshal marched on the 30th ultimo, with the 2d corps to Passi, and posted the 3d in Csegeg, where a bridge is thrown over the Theiss. On the 31st the field-marshal learned that Georgy had withdrawn to the Theiss without waiting to be attacked. Accordingly, the Russian General ordered Gen. Osten-Sacken, who was advancing from Kaschan, to march to Tokay, and occupy the passage over the river.

Meanwhile he himself (Paskiewitch) advanced from Passi to Csegeg, crossed the Theiss, by the bridge thrown across the Theiss, reached Uj-Varos on the 1st, and Debreczin on the 2d. This town was occupied by a corps of 18,000 rebels, with 40 cannon, under Nazy-Sandor, which, resolved on resistance, had placed their batteries in position, and opened a violent fire against the vanguard.

But the many 12 pounder batteries which were directed against the enemy, answered his fire with such effect that, alarmed by the simultaneous charges of the Muselman regiment and one of the Radetski hussars, and by the storming columns of the infantry, he took to flight. A whole battalion of Houved was cut to pieces, and six cannon, and 2000 prisoners were taken."

The Vienna papers state officially that General Haynau entered Szegeden, on the 2d, without experiencing any resistance. The evening edition of the Wiener Zeitung, letters, direct from the headquarters of Gen. Haynau, dated at Szegeden on the evening of the 4th, announce that, during the night of the 3d, bridges were thrown in several places over the Theiss. On the 4th the fortified camp of the Magyars (under the command of Meszaros, Dembinski, and Desoffy) was attacked, and all the entrenchments were taken after a determined resistance. The Imperialists troops advanced victoriously on all sides. The courier who arrived in Vienna from Szegeden, on his journey through Stuhlweissenburg, &c., met no armed Magyars. Pesth was perfectly quiet, although the result of the sally from Comorn was known.

Accounts from the south state that the Ban was preparing to resume the offensive, and that the Imperialists had succeeded in destroying, by a fire-ship, the bridge of boats which connected Peterwarden with the left bank of the Danube. The ultra-Sclavonic party in Agram have obstinately refused to publish the constitution of Francis Joseph, when called upon to do so by the Ban of Croatia; basing their opposition upon the right given by their own old constitution of discussing every new law in the Diet.

Some accounts have been received of the operations of Clam's Austrian corps near Cronstadt, and a victory is claimed over the Magyars; but the alleged advantages appear to have been of a very doubtful description.

Prince Swartzenburg has left Vienna, in order to visit the Emperor of Russia at Warsaw.

From the Western theatre of war we learn that the defeat of the Austrians before Comorn was more and more serious than was at first supposed. The Magyars are swarming through the whole country, far and wide. They already stand between Wieselburg and Hochstrasse, have occupied Szerdahely, in the Schutt, and northwards by Neuhausel, have thrown a bridge over the Neutze. A steamer, with troops and ammunition, is said to have fallen into their hands. One thing at least is certain, that they have not withdrawn yet into their fortress, on the contrary, the corps desired for relieving Comorn, in case of need, the strength of which cannot accurately be given, is partly on the right bank of the Danube, partly in the Schutt. It is not true that the Hungarians have advanced to Parendorf.

The Borzenhulle, of Hamburg, says:—"The immense number of troops sent by Russia against Hungary may be inferred from the fact that not only have the guards been sent from St. Petersburg, but large bodies of men from the remotest parts of the Russian Empire."

The Polish Gazette, of Posen, quotes a letter from Cracow, which states that on the 2d and 3d of August the Hungarians entered Gallicia, and took possession of the districts of Wadawitz, Scaldetz, Yarzcl, and Sanishawow.

It is admitted by a Russian bulletin, No. 15 published at Warsaw, not only that the Magyars have entered Moldavia, with a force of from 4000 to 5000 strong, but that they previously defeated the Russians in the pass of Ojtu, killing 40 and wounding 120 of their own men. After this affair the Russians retired to Oneski in Moldavia.

Prince Orloff arrived at Vienna on the 10, from the headquarters of Paskiewitch; he brought the intelligence of the route of Paskiewitch's army by Georgy. No bulletin had been published, and the Imperialists in Vienna were in a state of panic. The communications between Pesth and Vienna are entirely cut off by the Magyars, who, it was rumored, had retaken Pesth and Buda. The army of Haynau, even if he should have effected his junction with Jellachich, is now completely isolated.

Letters from Cracow say a Russian corps of observation of 40,000 men has been concentrated on our frontiers, in case the Hungarians should attempt an invasion of Poland. Nearly all the troops of Gallicia have already entered Hungary. Six or seven couriers from England, France and Russia, traverse the city daily. It is asserted that, in consequence of representations from England and France, that the Russians will evacuate Hungary in the course of forty days.

The Paris Presse, of Tuesday, states that a letter was received the previous day, by a member of the commission of the Legislative Assembly, announcing that the great Russian army had been completely defeated by the Magyars. It was added, that the Russian army of reserve was marching day and night towards Podolia and Volhynia, which were uncovered by the defeat, and which provinces the Emperor Nicholas feared would be invaded by the victorious Hungarians. Though this statement stands in need of confirmation, it may be remarked that it has the more likelihood, inasmuch as that, for the last eighteen months, the Presse has been the accredited organ of the Austrian embassy at Paris, and has more than once boasted of its connection with Russia.

It is stated in the Cologne Gazette that the public executioner of Presburg has refused to execute the sentences of death by hanging, passed by court-martial, on some Hungarian nobles, and has offered his resignation. The executioner of Bruun had accordingly been sent to Presburg.
