The Cambria arrived at Boston, on Saturday morning, and her mails reached this fort which it was said to contain. The idea city yesterday afternoon.

FRANCE.

the speech of Matthieu de la Drone, on the Roman question, an altercation arose between M. Thiers, and M. Bixio, Ex-Ministhe former had said the election of Louis Napoleon would be a disgrace to France. Theirs demanded satisfaction.

A duel took place immediately: one shot was fired by each at twenty paces distance, but neither were wounded, and the seconds came forward and said that the parties had done all that honor required. Both members returned to the Assembly, just as the sitting was adjourning.

De la Rossiere was the last speaker, and would continue his address the next day.

binski, are very interesting; Bem, as soon as he was informed of the determination of same enemies and the same friends as it, he was determined to become a subject of the Sultan's and to serve under his colors, and that he would embrace Islamism; that on quitting Hungary his resolution was already taken, but that if he had not made his profession of faith sooner, it was because he did not wish to have the appearance of yielding to fear. He added, that he did not ask any one to follow his example. Nevertheless Generals Kmelz and Slaen and about thirty officers would not separate from him, and have made a declaration in favor

Kossuth, who was greatly irritated against Bem, went immediately to the Hungarian camp, and informed the men the Porte resisted the demands of Russia and Austria and that England and France appeared decided to assist the Porte, and he supplicated them not to imprint a stain on the flag of our guide, Carravahal, informed me that Christian Hungary, which they had always from Zuni, which stands upon the Rio Zuserved with honor. Some words from Kossuth, gave rise to the opinion that Bem and his companions had yielded to the promises of the Porte, a great agitation showed itself in the Hungarian camp, and it was at one time feared that a disturbance would take place. Dembinski has not become a Mussulman, but he has openly acknowledged that the Porte had nothing whatever to do with the abjuration of Bem, and his companions, and he has even written letters to the Grand Vizier and the Seraskier in which he expresses his gratitude.

Discoveries in New Mexico.

The National Intelligencer publishes an interesting letter from Lietenaut J. H. Simpson, of the corps of Topographical Engineers, to the Chief of the Topographical Bureau, dated Santa Fe, the 28th September, and giving an interesting account of the recent expedition into the Navojoe country, which resulted in effecting a treaty with that savage tribe, in which the right of the United States to establish military posts, Indian agencies, & trading houses is fully acknowedged. The expedition, consisting of artillery and infuntry, numbered about 400 men. It left Santa Fe on the 16th of August and returned on the 20th September. The road taken was southwardly, via Santa Domingo. Japez, and then north of west, over and through a series of arroyas, canons, and egociated. The return route lay more southwardly, and was by the way of the Pueblos of Zuni Lagunz, to Albuquerque. The whole distance to the mouth of the canon of Chaille from Santa Fe was, by the outward route, 279 miles; by the return route 207. The letter proceeds giving par-

All along the route we met with objects of interests; but what excited probably more than any thing else, was a series of ruins in the canons of Chacco, which, doubtless, from their locality, appearance, and numbers, are rihe veritable ruins of Aztecs of the 12th century; the locality of which, on the authority of some of the maps, Humboldt has ascribed to the vicinage of the very spot were they were found. These ruins are of an exceedingly interesting character, both on account of the mechanical skill and taste syhich they display, and of the undoubted evidence which they furnish of having been erected at a very remote period. The Indians of the present day know nothing of them except that according to tradition, they were once inhabited by a people which came from the North; that Montezuma was the governor of this people; and that, after living here for a period, they dissappeared---some eastwardly towards the Rio Grande, and others southwardly towards the city of

Each pueblo is a single structure, covering in some instances as much as two acres in extent; discovering in places, by the still standing walls, four stories in height, and containing as many as three and four hundred rooms, The main walls, plain surfaces, throughout their whole extent, on the exterior, are very nearly three feet thick at base, and retreat on the inner side by a series of small jogs from bottom to top, thus lessening the thickness gradually from the bottom up-wards. The whole structure is built of a beautifully compact lamellar sandstone ; the inner portion of this kind of stone and of clay mortar; and the outer portion faced with pieces of rectangular exactness, and so thin that three inches may be considered us their famed canon of Chaille, which has ever been regarded as the stronghold of the Navajoes. on account of the immense depth and inaccessibiliy of its walls, and the impregnable of the existence of the fort we are now enabled to explode; the security which it is cnpable of affording to the Navajoes we find The advices from Paris, state that during has been overrated; but the depth and sublimity of the canon, so far from having been too greatly magnified, we are now free to acknowledge very much surpassed our excountry affords, and will ever command the attention of the geologist and tourist.

A third object of interest which the expedition has brought to light, is the existence of a rock, of magnificent proportions and of fair surface, upon which were found inscribed, in some instances, in beautiful and deeply engraven characters, the names of a number of persons of rank and of distinction, in connection with their dates of passing by the locality, and some other incidental allusions to occupation and history. One of The change of creed of Bem, Kinely and these dates reaches back as far as 1606, and other officers is confirmed. The following there are a number of others of this and the details concerning Bem, Kossuth and Dem- succeeding century. It is not at all improbable that these inscriptions may be found of value in the suggestment or establishment the Sultan to resist the demands of Russia. of some point or points of history, and as and Austria, declared that his country was such are to be regarded with attention and his first religion, that the Sultan having the interest, fac similes of all these inscriptions I have had taken, as well as drawings made of every important object of natural of all the principal ruins which have come | deed, is more difficult than to make foreignunder our observation.

Another matter of interest which has een evolved by the expedition, and which have come near forgetting, but which, probably stands formost in point of value, is a belief that we have hit upon a middle route between the southern detour made by ern one, called the Spanish trail route, said handlesters among other nations, and fell to be equally long. It is very certain that from Santa Fe to Zuni, a distance of nearrect course to the city of the Angels, we immediately nothing else; and its dominion has traverse a well watered, wooded, and pastured route, which, with very little labor can be made an excellent wagon road. And erally a direct westwardly course to the Colorado, and which he has followed down to its mouth from Zuni to the Colorado, by way of the Rio Zuni, the road is equally practicable for wagons, and abounds in the necessary quantum of wood, grass, and water. If so, and the route can be as favorably extended from the Colorado westward to the Pacific, of which I have very little doubt, there is no question but that a wagon route has been obtained which cannot but shorten the distance to San Francisco at least from three to four hundred miles, if not

Annexation.

Lord Elgin, says the North American, is adopting a very silly mode of quelling the annexation feeling in Canada. A manifesto, bearing about fifty signatures, having appeared, a circular was addressed by the adjutant General of militia in Canada to all the commanding officers of the various militia corps in Montreal, desiring that they would. ascertain if any of their officers signed the annexation address; and if so, whether it was of their own free will and accord. If Scott of a new race in Australia or South they replied that they did it willingly, they Africa saying the same of the Vedas or the were to be removed from office, as the government will allow no person to remain in its employment who would sign such a pamountain passes, to the mouth of the renowned canon of Chaille, where the treaty was these officers left. The same sort of letter was also sent to some of the Queen's Council, who dealt with it in a very summary way. They peremptorily refused to be catechized as to their private opinions or acts, and snapped their fingers in Lord Elgin's

This proceeding is not new-it has been tried in England and Ireland, and always failed. Opinions cannot be put down by threats or removal from office, nor can effort be thwarted by removal-and so Lord Elgin and his council will find. He and they could not have devised a better plan of running their heads against a political stone wall, than by elevating those who have been removed into the dignity of martyrs. The very moment they were deposed for opinion's sake, sympathies in the heart of other people, not stirred up before, belonged to them, and will give them strength to pursue their object with increasing ardor. The prospects of ultimate success are raised and drawn nearer by the oppressive action.

Lord Elgin and his counsellors are evidently greatly alarmed, and it would seem, with the best of reason in the world. But they sadly mistake their course, when they make restriction and oppression their principal refuge and hope. Annexation is now something more than mere speculation in the minds of the people of Canada. It is a fixed idea and hope, toward which the sympathies bend and which the judgement ap-

The Bible.

The Bible supposing it to be, other than it pretends to be, presents us with a singular phenomenon in the space which it occupies hroughout the continued history of literature. We see nothing like it, and it may well perplex the infidel to account for it, nor need his sagacity disdain to enter a little more deeply into its possible cause than he is usually inclined to do. It has not given to any other book of religion thus to triumph over national prejudices, and lodge itself securely in the heart of great communities-varying by every conceivable diversity of langunge, race, manner and customs; and, indeed agreeing in nothing but a veneration for itself. It adapts itself with facility to the revolutions of thought and feeling which shake to pieces all things else; and flexibly accommodates itself to the progress of society and the changes of civilisation. Even conquests-the formation of new-do not affect the continuity of its empire. It lays hold of the new as well as of the old, and only from the time they commenced. transmigrates with the spirit of humanity; attracting to itself, by its own moral power, in all the communities it enters, a ceaseless effort for its propagation, illustration and de-

Other systems of religion are usually delicate exotics, and will not bear transplanting. The gods of the natons are local deities, and reluctantly quit their native soil; at all events, they patronise only their favorite races, and perish at once, when the tribe or nation of their worshippers become curiousity, and plans and drawings made extinct-often long before .-- Nothing, iners feel anything but the utmost indifference (except as an object of philosophic curious) iv) about the religion of other nations; and no portion of their national literature is regarded as more tedious or unattractive than that which treats of their theology. The elegant mythology of Greece and Rome made gated by the sword; but it has been propato that logic.

If the Bible be false, the facility with which it overleaps the otherwise impassable boundaries of race and clime, and domiciliates itself among so many different nations, is asni, a tributary of the Colorado, running gen- suredly a far more striking and wonderful proof of human ignorance, perverseness and stupidity, than is afforded in the limited prevalence of even the most abject superstitions; or, if it really has merits which, though a fable, have enabled it to impose kind, wonderful indeed must have been the. skill in its composition; so wonderfully that even the infidel himself ought never to regard it but with the profoundest reverence, as far too successful and sublime.

In his last illness, a few days before his leath, Sir Walter Scott asked Mr. Lockhart to rend for him. Mr. Lockhart inquired what book he would like. 'Can you ask?' said Sir Walter; "there is but one," and requested him to read a chapter of the gospel of John. When will an equal genius, to whom all the realms of fiction are as lamiliar as to him, say the like of some professed revelation, originating among a race and associated with a history and clime as foreign as those connected with the birthplace of the Bible, from those of the ancestry of Sir Walter Scott? Can we by any stretch of imagination, suppose some Walter
