Horrible Scene at an Execution. Allgemeine Zeitung contains the following account of a frightful spectacle recently exhibited at a public execution in Switzerland. A strange circumstance has just taken place at Herisan, the capital of Inner Appenzell, in Switzerland, showing how much in these countries of old liberties civilization is behind hand in some matters. A young girl of 19, some months back, assassinated her rival. Her lover was arrested with her, and she caused him of the crime, both were put to the torture. The girl yielded to the pain, and confessed her crime; the young man held firm to his denial; the former was condemned to death, and on the 7th of the month was decapitated with a sword on the market-place of Herisan. The fact is itself a startling one, but the details are just as strange. For 2 hours the woman was able to struggle against four individuals charged with the execution. After the first hour the strength of the woman was still so great that the men were obliged to desist. The authorities were then consulted, but they declared that justice ought to follow its course. The struggle then recommenced with greater intensity, and despair seemed to have redoubled the woman's force. At the end of another hour she was at last bound by the hair to a stake, and the sword of the executioner then carried the sentence into effect.

THE EXEMPTION LAW.—A writer in the Harrisburg Union seems not to think that exemption laws are the sovereign remedy for poverty that some have thought them. He suggests before a poor man can have a homestead to exempt, he must acquire it somehow? and the fact that he can defy his creditor may prevent his acquiring property before he earns it; also that exemptions may stand greatly in the way of poor laborers and mechanics getting paid for work, unless they work only for the rich. There is some show of plausibility in this. We have wondered sometimes how a poor shoemaker, for instance, who buys his leather and works it up for a set of customers, one half of whom have nothing the law can touch, would be benefited by an exemption law, if his customers choose to avail themselves of it. Still we are not prepared to say that exemption to a certain extent is not right, proper, and necessary.—Bucks County Intelligencer.
