

Strange Incidents Attending a Death.

Under this head the Christian Register relates the following remarkable incident. We do not think it improper to state that the individual referred to is the late Mr. Greigg, who was lost at Gloucester, Friday, August 10th, 1850, by the capsizing of a boat in a squall.

The following is a statement of facts as they occurred—as simple and short as we can make them. It would be easy to give wide play to sentiment and fancy, in connection with so striking and unusual an occurrence. Superstition might attach to it, irrational fears, or hopes as groundless. We confess we hardly know what to do with events like those ourselves—breaking in, as they do, upon the settled order of our experience, and startling us with some new exception to the common course of our observations.

A gentleman, with some friends, was lately rambling over the rocks, near the water, in one of our sea-shore towns. His attention was presently attracted by a robin, full grown, and apparently quite unharmed, running in his path, flitting about his feet, and contrary to the proverbial shy instinct of that bird, keeping very near him.

The California Difficulties.

The Washington correspondent of the Journal of Commerce says, the disorders in California produce a deep sensation there. Those acquainted with the circumstances and causes of the squatters' war, say that the squatters have some show of right.

Much useful, and indeed indispensable legislation, will fall through, unless, as some propose, it should be prolonged for another week. As soon as the law can be prescribed and settled, the people of California will conform to it, and abide by it.

Congress must provide some system for disposing of the gold bearing lands and also the other public lands. Whether they will, in conformity with established policy, grant pre-emption rights to small sections, remain to be seen. It is proposed to grant leases, on certain rents, to small tracts of the gold lands, and, thus, those parties claiming the same tracts—the Spanish grantees, the squatters, and Uncle Sam's lessees.

The United States Mint.

This elegant establishment, so well worthy the notice and attention of every person in Philadelphia, is thus described by a correspondent of the Pennsylvania :

The Mint is a handsome white stuccoed building, with a plain but not inelegant portico. The visitor, on entering the vestibule, and asking permission to see the interior, is requested to record his name in a book kept for the purpose. He is then conducted, first to a room in the rear, where the California dust is melted. The appearance of this room is as gloomy and dingy as that of an ordinary iron foundry.

There is a bill now pending before Congress for the better security of the lives of passengers on boats or vessels propelled in whole or in part by steam, which scrupulously calculated to effectively protect the immense amount of property, and the great number of lives constantly exposed to destruction upon steam vessels, and we think few will deny that there is an imperative duty resting upon Congress in reference to this matter.

Protection of Travellers on Steamers.
