Barber & Young's Iron and Hardware Store,

IN ALLENTOWN.
Take this method to inform the citizens of Allentown and the public in general, that they still continue the IRON AND HARDWARE Business, in all its various branches, at their old stand in Hamilton street, above Market square, where they are always ready to sell to their customers and others at the lowest prices. They also give timely notice, that they will STOP THE CREDIT SYSTEM
after the first of October next, and sell for cash only. They believe to be doing a particular favor to their customers, as they will sell for cash but a very small profit, believing it to be the interest of all.

Jenny Lind in America! Great Excitement!!

Thousands are nightly congregated at Castle Garden, New York, to listen to the Swedish Nightingale, whose melodious voice is enchanting her vast assemblages. Pareygricks, relating her sky high, are a daily feature of the press of New York; but all this excitement falls far short of the consternation that is produced among the citizens of Allentown and its vicinity, by the arrival of a most splendid assortment of whose reputation for selling cheap and good Goods stands second to none—may be acknowledged by economists to have no equals in this and the adjoining counties. Their stock in the Ladies' line consists of Black and Fancy Silks, Black Lustre, Black and Fancy Merino, Thibet Cloth, Muslin de Laines, Cashmeres, Gingham, Prints and in fact all they may desire in our line of business.

FALL AND WINTER GOODS AT THE

The Gentlemen will find such as French and American Cloth, of all colors and prices, Black and Fancy Cassimeres, Black Satin and Brocade Vestings, Suitings, Velvet Cord, Kentucky Jeans, &c., presenting an assortment eclipsing all former ones.

New Prospectus of the Scientific American.

The publishers of the Scientific American respectfully give notice that the Sixth Volume of this valuable Journal will be commenced on the 21st of September, offering a favorable opportunity for all to subscribe who take an interest in the progress and development of the Mechanics' Arts and Manufactures of our country. The character of the Scientific American is too well known throughout the country to require a detailed account of the various subjects discussed through its columns. It is sufficient to say, that its circulation is immensely larger than any scientific journal in the world.

It is published weekly, in Quarto Form, on fine paper; affording, at the end of the year, an illustrated Encyclopedia of over four hundred pages, with an Index, and from five to six hundred original Engravings, described by letters of reference; besides a vast amount of practical information concerning the progress of Scientific and Mechanical improvements, Chemistry, civil Engineering, Manufacturing in its various branches, Architecture, Masonry, Botany, in short, it embraces the entire range of the Arts and Sciences.

It also possesses an original feature not found in any other weekly journal in the country, viz: an Official List of Patent Claims, prepared expressly for its columns at the Patent Office,—thus constituting it the "American Repository of Inventions."

In connection with the Publishing department, the proprietors transact the most extensive Home and Foreign Patent business done in this country, consequently their facilities must be correspondingly superior.

All Letters must be Post Paid and directed to

A Romance in Indian Life.

A correspondent of the Picayune, writing from Madisonville, La., relates the following incident in Indian life:—

A large number of Choctaw Indians still reside in the neighborhood, and as I gazed on a group of young squaws, some of whom had really beautiful features, and seemed to pride themselves on the display of their Indian dresses and ornaments, I could not help thinking that if they were educated and dressed for a ball room, they would vie with many a pale faced beauty. Madisonville was the terminus of the military road ordered to be cut from Tennessee by General Jackson, during the last war with England. This road was afterwards used by flat boatmen, who having descended the Ohio and Mississippi, and sold their boats and produce would cross the lake on a sloop or schooner to this place, and then travel home on foot. In those times it frequently took a vessel between two and three days to make a trip, when it is now made in nearly as many hours. The continuation of parts of this road through Mississippi still exists, and is known by the name of the "old Natchez trace."

There has been many a story told of the romantic adventures of the flat-boatmen in their travels through the "wilderness," as it was then called.—On the disbanding of the volunteers after the battle of New Orleans, this road became infested with robbers, who sought the flat-boatmen as their prey, and the road became very dangerous to travel, except in large parties. A young boatman who had realized a large profit on his produce, was returning home on one occasion by this road, when he was severely wounded by a rifle ball, robbed of all his money, and left for dead. He was found by a young Indian girl of exquisite beauty, the daughter of a chief who owned a large tract of land in Mississippi. The girl perceiving some signs of life, ran to fetch some water, which she gave him to drink, and then dragging him into a thicket, went to the camp and obtained two of her tribe to bring in the wounded man. His wound was dressed, and the Indian girl attended him, and watched over him from day to day, until he recovered.

During his illness, the young boatman observed that the Indian girl watched him with deep interest, and his gratitude soon deepened into love. He made her his bride, and the old chief gave to him his daughter's share of the land, which she soon turned into a plantation, and civilized his wife. Though the old chief refused to live with him, he frequently came to see them and their children, and as the country gradually became settled, the Indian wife of the white man, was long acknowledged to be the most beautiful and dignified lady in that section of the State.

Celestials.

In no country in the world, has a person so good an opportunity of forming a correct opinion of the relative merits, as citizens, of the various kindreds and people of the earth as in California. Here are found representatives of all nations—mingling together in the common pursuits of business—putting off old habits and customs, and adopting new ones—showing a willing obedience to laws of which they have no conception from early education, or wantonly bidding defiance to their mandates through ignorance or careless opposition. An individual of a widely different race—a distinct religion, a government of laws that we should consider a perfect burlesque upon civil institutions, who comes among us, quietly and cheerfully performing all the duties of a law-abiding citizen, whenever those duties are made known to him, gives evidence of an inherent sense of right and duty, that cannot fail to impress favorably any one with whom he comes in contact.

Such are the representatives of the Chinese nation now in California, and we hesitate not to say, that in all those qualities which go to make up the good citizen, they are second to no foreigners in our midst. Many of them are in the mines. The tax upon foreign miners operates as generously upon them as others. Yet they have never refused to pay when called upon, nor even blustered about the matter. If they happened not to have the money at the moment, a day was named, and the money was forthcoming. These facts we have from collectors themselves. All honor then, say we, to the sable sons of the "flowery land," and in the words of their own complimentary proverb, "may they live a thousand years and never eat dirt."

Modest.—"Pray," said Mr. —, to a gentleman who overtook him on the road, "will you have the complaisance, to take my great coat in your carriage to town?" With pleasure, sir; but how will you get it again?" "Oh, very easy," replied the modest applicant; "I shall remain in it."

The aim of education should be to teach rather how to think, than what to think; rather to improve our minds, so as to enable us to think for ourselves; than to load the memory with the thoughts of other men.
