By a little persuasion, however, they were pre-vailed upon to make the exploration. With much difficulty they descended some forty feet, when, to their great astonishment, they found themselves in an immense apartment. They immediately determined to fully explore the cave they had discovered. They found that this room opened into others, and these into still others, and, that apparently there was no termination to the cave. They followed the main passage some four or five miles, according to their best calculations, election to the Senate, of which he has been a when they were admonished by their lights that they must return. From the Plough, Loom, and Anvil. APPEAL TO THE Friends of the American System, Of Whatever Occupation or Party.

WE unite in the belief that the prosperity of American industry depends on the question-Shall the laws of the country protect American labor against the down-trodden labor of Europe; and so diversify our employments, and secure for our products a steady market at home? or, shall we, by releasing the government from the obligation to develope our own resources, drive the country still further back on subjection to what General Jackson denounced as "the policy of British merchants?" Yes, friends, this, after all, is and will continue to be the great bone of contention!

Under a system of steady protection, capital and labor are invited to go into the use of our own fuel and the manufacture of our own cloth, and iron, and china, and glass; employments become diversified, population concentrates; and with that concentration comes facility of combination, from which springs agricultural and every social improvement. Withdraw the countenance of government, and you diminish the number of employments, scatter the people, drive an over-proportion to the plough, and leave no reliable market for the ever-increasing surplus products of the land.

Old party lines are becoming fainter and fainter. The people for the time are dividing into Unionists and Disunionists. But amalgamate or separate as we may, disclaim or assume what names we may, the people or opponents of a policy that will encourage ber, in Upper Saucon township, Lehigh domestic industry against the whole world county, the following valuable property: forego the profit of manufacturing for ourselves the raw materials with which God has blessed our country. Those who go and butcher knives, with a variety of other for protection invite the down-trouden laborer of Europe to come and help us to work up, here on the spot where Providence has bestowed them to be used, our own abundant materials for every industry .- They say to the immigrant, "We will protect and elevate you to our own level; and here, where you will become able customers, we will enjoy with you that real bona fide free trade, which benefits and blesses all.' Those who are opposed to protection hang out on their banner, "Let trade be free-let us contend against the world, for the markets of the world;" to do which successfully, we must "prepare" to under work and out-starve the world.

Now, friends of the American system, be not discouraged. Parties may see saw and fluctuate-up to-day and down to merrowbut, under whatever name, the party that struggles on for the protection of our own industry-for the encouragement and elevation of our own labor, must ultinately succeed. It must be, sooner or later, the established policy of this country. It is the cause of our country, of humanity, of progress, of civilization. The truth is mighty, and finally it must prevail.

He go then for protection. Render, do you ! "Yes," you answer. Well then, Cannot 100 gentlemen be found, in all the States, who will contribute $10 each, and find subscribers, or indicate to whom the numbers shall be sent? What say you, friends of domestic industry! Here I, without a dollar, am laboring for the cause, day in and day out, most willingly, for I know there is no other guarantee for general uniform improvement and prosperity for those whose labor and capital are employed in agriculture; but, I must have bread, and what I here ask will barely give it. I ask no man's charity--- ! offer a full equivalent, and contribute to the cause the hard earnings of my own labor to the amount of hundreds where I ask for tens. I will keep, and if allowed, publish, the names of all who respond to this call. Time will soon decide. JOHN S. SKINNER.
