

Men of Principal.

Dr. Rice describes these men in the following clear and just manner. 1. They are men whose opinions are the result of honest, candid inquiry, concerning what is true and what is right. 2. They are men whose convictions are not mere abstractions lying like useless lumber in the chambers of the mind, nor convenient notions to be used when circumstances are favorable, but practical principles for the constant regulation of their conduct. 3. They are men who, when the interests of truth and righteousness require them to express or act on their principles, never stop to enquire what others will think, or whether their popularity or their temporal interests will be injured. They have not one set of opinions for confidential friends, and another for the public. 4. They are men whose principles are neither changed nor modified by the popular breeze, but only by what appears to them to be conclusive evidence. Such men must have enemies; and not infrequently they are reproached by those whose piety perhaps ought not to be questioned. The developments of time, however, silence their enemies, and recollect those who joined in the outcry against them. What a blessing to the church of Christ, if all her ministers and members were men of principle.

Austria against the United States.

A Washington letter writer, speaking of the course of the United States government towards the Hungarian refugees, says: It appears that Austria has been acting a part toward this government which may terminate in a dissolution of our diplomatic relations. As I understand the matter, the Cabinet at Vienna instructed the Austrian charge at this capital, Mr. Hulseman, to represent to the administration, that, in the event of Kossuth and his compatriots being received and afforded an asylum here, it would be cause sufficient for that government, to withdraw its representatives. Accordingly, Mr. Clayton was officially informed of the ultimatum; but before he had time to decide upon his course, Mr. Webster was installed as his successor. Mr. Webster was not long in determining what to do. He represented to Mr. Hulseman that the refugees of bleeding Hungary would be received with open arms, and that if Austria demanded, his passports would be ready at any moment. Whereupon Mr. H. wrote home for further instructions, but these not having arrived, the chagrined diplomat may be supposed to serve only in a quasi capacity. This statement I receive from such authority as I may rely upon, and I presume it is essentially correct. We gain little by keeping up the show of intercourse, for the withdrawal of our exports to, and imports from, the ports of the empire, are not without the protection of a charge, and can as well be looked after by a consular officer with ordinary commercial power.

Menageries.

The late London papers announce the death of Jeremiah Wombwell, at the age of seventy-two years. He was the owner of three large traveling menageries, embracing a large collection of rare and valuable wild animals and birds, by the exhibition of which he had acquired a handsome fortune. He acknowledged himself partial to the serpent species, from the fact that in early life the accidental purchase of a pair of boa constrictors from the importers at the London docks, for the sum of £75, and the success of the exhibition, was the means of introducing him into his "profession." He had been of late years very successful in breeding, and possessed, at the time of his death, more than twenty lions and five elephants, in addition to an unrivaled collection of other wild animals. Some time since, and it is the only instance on record, one of his lionesses bit a litter of two white cubs. The proprietors of menageries experience great loss from disease, mortality, and accident; and Mr. Wombwell calculated that he had lost, from first to last, a fortune of at least £12,000 to £15,000 by mortality among his wild beasts, birds, and animals. Not many years since, a fine ostrich, worth £200, which could have picked crumbs from a ceiling twelve feet high, thrust its bill between the bars of its cage, gave it an unlucky twist, and in attempting to withdraw it literally broke its neck. Monkeys become exceedingly delicate when imported into England. They are soon affected by cold, and when they begin to cough, very generally fall into consumption, and exhibit all the symptoms of human beings laboring under the same complaint. The value of wild animals, like anything else, varies according to supply and demand. Panthers have been sold as high as £300, but at other times they can be had for £100. A good panther is worth £100; lamas from £30 to £40, zebras from £150 to £200. The other kind of monkeys are very valuable, and lamas and zebras are always exceedingly high. Upon lions, lionesses, and elephants, it is impossible to fix any price. Two cubs is the usual litter of the lioness. But Mr. Wombwell formerly had owned one which repeatedly dropped four. In these cases she nursed two, and neglected the others. But Mr. Wombwell had a beautiful pointer bitch, which in her lifetime suckled four lions. The cost of Mr. Wombwell's three establishments was enormous—on an average at least £35 per day each. His caravan amounted to upwards of 40, and his stud—the finest breed of draught horses—varying from 110 to 120. The expenses of his hands were estimated at £40 per week, while the amount he paid for turpentine fells in the course of a year formed a prominent item in his expenditure. Even the ale of one of his elephants came to something throughout the twelve months, to say nothing of leaves, (the best bread,) grass, hay, and the capacious man that consumed the latter article at an enormous rate.

A turkey weighing thirty pounds, raised in Camden county, New Jersey, was sold in the Philadelphia market on Monday last, for sixteen dollars.

AVOID RECEIVING.—It is not generally known, that no means have been left unemployed by that class of persons who attempt to counterfeit every good medicine that has acquired public confidence, to mislead the public into a belief that their oil is the same as Merchant's Gargling Oil.

Be not deceived therefore by such knavery, and be not satisfied except you find the marks of the genuine article upon the bottle. Of this celebrated medicine one gentleman affirms that he cured a valuable horse of a WINDGALL which had become callous. Another says he has cured a fine horse of the Sweeney which nothing else would effect. Another has cured himself by the use of the Oil of Rheumatism, and in his family has used it for all complaints requiring an external remedy.

Another who had it "on hand," says that he relieved himself immediately of severe and continued pain, resulting from the setting of a dislocated knee joint which every application made for twenty four hours had failed to perform, he soon obtained sleep. It has cured Founders, and is a common remedy for Galls, Sprains, Bruises, Strains, Cramps, Weakness of the Joints and Limbs, Frozen Feet, Contraction of the Muscles, Scalds, &c., and if all the facts were told they are so remarkable, they would probably not be believed, except by those who have become acquainted with the Oil.

Dauphin County, Pa.—This county has a population of 36,744, an increase of 6623 in the last ten years. Harrisburg borough, which is the county seat, has 2917 inhabitants, an increase of 2627.

High Life.—The Pittsburg American notices an arrival in that city of a runaway couple, from Lancaster, the groom being an old farmer of 75, worth $30,000, and the bride a girl of 18.
