Miscellaneous Selections. [From the Baltimore Sun of Tuesday] Confession of the Cosden Massacre.

We received, last evening, the following hasty letter from our correspondent at Chestertown, written yesterday morning, a half hour after the confession to which it alluded, was made. It will be seen that a full development of this bloody transaction has been made by one of the parties to the deed, and that all of the accused participants are

CHESTERTOWN, May 26, 1851 Gentlemen-We have now a confession His assortment of Clocks consist of Brass Cosden massacre, which is thought to be of one of the parties under arrest for the worthy of credit. About the time of the murder, a man by the name of Hand, living near Blackbird suddenly, and without ases Gold and Silver Pencils, Watch-chains, to New Jersey. A few days after his wife also left. The movement of these people were of course regarded as suspicious, and efforts have for some time past been made to obtain a knowledge of their whereabouts. Silver tea and table spoons, Gold and Silver A few days since Mrs. Hand was brought Spectacles, to suit all ages, Spectacle glasses, to Chestertown, and made statements to the following effect :- That on the morning after the murder, at a very early hour, a man by the name of Stephen Shaw, who boarded in the house with herself and husband, came running into the house with a musket in his hand, and very much under the nifluence of liquor-that he told her the Cosden family were murdered, and that himself, Taylor, Shelton and Murphy were the parties-that he had been solicited by Taylor to join the conspiracy, which he supposed was only for plunder, and not for is business, and liberal prices, to have a murder-that he and Taylor proceeded, on the evening of the murder, to the Swantown mill (about a half mile from Cosden's) and were there joined by Shelton and Murphy; that he had a double-barrel gun, Taylor a musket, Shelton a double-barrel gun and double-barrel pistol and Murphy a doublebarrel gun. He then proceeded to state that upon arriving at the house, Taylor fired through the window and shot down Cos len, and then, snatching away Shaw's gun, shot Mrs. Cosden, as she ran out. He also stat a that Shelton murdered Miss Cosden and Miss Webster, and Taylor shot the black women, but that Murphy took no part in the murder. He asserts that he himself was drunk and took no part in the murder, and that he was afterwards so overcome by liquor that he fell in the fence corner and lay there for several hours. Shaw was arrested on Saturday, and this meraing has made a full confesssion, correborating all the statements made by Mrs. To all who have made use of it, the full- Hand's testimony will convict him, and Hand, saying "that he knows that Mrs. given, and all of that he may as well make a clean breast of whom agree in pronouncing it as superior it." He has been confronted with the parties

> Murphy, he says, he had never seen before, but believes the man he sees in jail a-Murphy, to have been the murderer. is little or no doubt entertained of the truth of this confession.

The cause of the sudden flight of Mrs. Hand, was fear that, as she possessed Shaw's secret, he might do her some bodily harm, to prevent her divulging it. Since the above letter came to hand we have conversed with a gentlemen direct from Chestertown, who was present at the jail yesterday morning when Shaw was confronted with the prisoners, and made his confession. He says he never saw a more hardened set of men collected together. The excitement in Chestertown was intense, and great joy was manifested by the people at the certainty of all the murderers being in custody. Webster, the uncle to Mrs. Cosden, is now acknowledged to be free of all participation in the bloody deed, and will be discharged in a few days. The prisoners most revolting spectacle. Their trial will take place next week.

Distances in the Crystal Palace.

A gallery for the accommodation of visitors has been erected at the eastern extremity of the building, under shelter of the American Eagle :- and from this, the view down the long interminable nave-travelling over the sunny central spot, and bringing all the features and incidents of this main aisle into a single picture-was a marble to behold. Strange measures of distance present themselves at this point.-When the ceremonial was in progress - of the loud Anthem performed in the transept, half-way down, no sound reached the eastty, real, personal and mixed, baring date on the 30th of April, 1851, to the undersigned, cheered, the sound came to the ear like a far, faint and often doubtful echo. From the moment when the Queen turned west out. of the tansept on her circuit of the nave, till al laws against the Quakers were abrogated she reached it again by the opposite side, in 30 days from the date hereof. And such all was silent for those in the gallery. Of panied her march not a note came over the American frontier. The great organ in the western gallery might as well have been you won't buy any more gunpowder ten for, playing over seas. The organ on the floor mother.' Why not?' Because every far east of the nave, which poured forth its' time she drinks it she blows me up.

music as the head of the procession came alongside, was the first reporter to the ear of what was going on. The eye also took measures of distances at this point which were among the curious experiences of the day. Glancing along the greatly narrowed avenue marked by the continuous double line of spectators between whom the Queen was to pass up the southern side, the perspective seemed to strech infinitely away, and the termination was a point which the eye could not define. When the procession turned this point, the fact could not be ascertained by the unassisted vission-and it had made some progress up the avenue when it was discovered by means of a telescope .- Then it was curious to watch how something dim and unconfined scemed blotting out the line along which the eye ranshortening the distance whithout revealing itself, like the travel of a shadow :-till gradually it took masses and forms, and finally resolved itself into its gay elements. and was taken up by attending music !--

Atheneum. Origin of the Quakers

In Lossing's Pictorial Field Book of the Revolution, (the first of which, consisting of twelve numbers, has just been completed.) we find the following account of the origin of the Quakers. Like all else from he pen of its authur, it is entitled to crelence, as he is indefatigable in his exerions to give the most authentic informa-

"The Quaker sect sprang up in England about 1656, under George Fox, and recieved their name from the peculiar shasing or quaking of their bodies while preaching. They went furthur than the straitest Purituns in disregarding human authority when opposed to the teachings of the Bible, yet they were allowed full liberty of action uring the protectorate of Oliver Cromwell.

They denounced war, persecution for reigious opinions, and above all, the idolatry demanded by rulers in Church and State of those under their control. They condemned all ordained and paid priesthoods, refused to take onths, and thus, struck a direct blow at the hierarchy. They differed from the Puritans in many things, and became noxious to them. They derived their system of morals and politics chiefly from the New Testament, while the Puritans took theirs from the more sanguinary and intolerant modes of the old dispensation. Laying aside the falsehoods of politeness and flattery, they renounced all titles, addressed all men, high or low, by the title of Friend, used the expressions yea and nay, and three and thou; and offices of kindness and affection to their fellow-creatures, James, constituted their practical religion. The Quakers might be regarded as representing that branch of the primitive Christians who esteemed Christianity an entirely new dispenition, world-wide in its objects; while the Puritans representing those Judaizing Christians who could not get rid of the idea of a eulm chosan people, to wit, themselves."

The English Purious had warned their breathren in America against these children in hell,' and the first appearance in the colony of Mary Fisher and Ann Austin. who came from Barbadoes, and professed the new doctrine greatly alarmed the New England theocracy. A special law was enacted, by which to bring a known Quaker into the colony was punishable with a fine of five hundred dollars, and the exaction of bonds to carry him back again. The Quaker himself was to be whipped twenty stripes, sent to the House of Correction, and kept there until transported. The introduction of Quaker books was prohibited, defenling Quaker opinions was punishable with fine, and finally banishment; and in 1657 it was enacted that for every hour's entertainment given to a Quaker, the entertainer should lose an ear on the first conviction, and the other on a second : and both males and females, on a third conviction, were to are heavily chained together, and present a have their tongues bored through with a red hot iron. In 1658 the death penalty was enacted. Under it those who should return to the colony a second time, after banishment, were to suffer death. From unwillingness to inflict death, it was provided by a new law, 1659, that any person convicted of being a Quaker should be delivered to the constable of the town, to be strip-ed naked from the middle upwards, and tied cart's tail and wipped through the town, and thence be immediately conveyed to the constable of the next town toward the border of our jurisdiction, and so from constable to constable, to the end of the outermost town, and so be whipped out of the colony.' In case of return this was to be twice repeated. The fourth time the convict was to be branded with the letter Ron the left shoulder and after that, if incorrigible, to incur > mportant element in American society during the eighteenth century." Father, said a roguish boy, I hope,
