Wild Pigeons.

The following item from the Cottage Gazette, published at Plattsburg, N. Y., will give our readers some idea of the abundance of wild pigeons in that neighborhood, this season: "From a correspondence in the Republican, we learn it has been calculated that nearly one million pigeons passed into Beckmantown this season, in two days, the flock covering some four or five miles in length. Their roost on Rand-Hill extended in the forest some six miles in length, and from one to two miles in width, each tree containing between twenty and eighty nests. Com-
