

Invasion of California.

The appointment of Pierre Bonaparte, a cousin of the French President, to the consulate at Charleston, S. C., with a salary of six thousand dollars is beginning to occasion speculation on the part of the American press. In connection with this appointment, the Paris correspondent of a morning cotemporary, mentions, that a large number of French soldiers have been sent out to California in disguise, and that the large French fleet in the Pacific, ostensibly destined to watch Japan, is most likely intended to operate against California. The two facts are considered, by the correspondent in question, to forbid warlike intentions on the part of the future emperor, against this republic.

For one, we have no fears, however on this point. Not that we think it impossible for the European despots to assail this country; because, with their vast means, such an assault would be comparatively easy. — But it is one thing to make an attack, and quite another to succeed in it, and the absolute rulers of the Old World, from Nicholas down, know this. — The American people cannot be conquered by any foreign power, or even by an alliance of foreign powers; they may fall a victim to internal dissension; they may through their own folly, separate and thus commit suicide; but if they remain united, and thus continue true to their great principles, banded Europe cannot overthrow them. The vastness of their own indomitable spirit, and the righteousness of their cause, will be a bulwark to them, mightier than that of Achilles.

There can be no question, nevertheless, that one of the weakest points in the territory of the republic, is California. The distances of that State from its sisters of the confederacy is so great as to forbid the possibility of timely assistance in case of invasion; while the lawless condition of a portion of the population of its cities, lessens the probabilities of a successful resistance. The prize, too, is one to tempt an unprincipled invader; and just the sort to inflame an imagination like that of France. A territory like California, teeming with gold, and commanding from its geographical position not only the Pacific ocean, but the back door of the United States, is a booty that Louis Napoleon would give right hand for, or he knows less of the temper of the French people than we suppose he does. — Such an acquisition would probably fix him permanently on the imperial throne. It would gratify the love of glory so dear to the Gauls, yet without embroiling him in war with his absolutist neighbors; and this is exactly what policy dictates to Louis Napoleon.

Nevertheless, we do not regard California as in peril, any more than we look on Pierre Bonaparte's appointment as threatening a dissolution of the Union. California would it is true, be a brilliant pear for Louis Napoleon to pluck, if we may use a favorite metaphor of his uncle; but the golden fruit is guarded by many dragons, in the shape of confederated free states. The thing is not to be did, even by a French fleet and army.

Easter Sunday.

On Easter Sunday the anniversary of Christ's resurrection, many singular customs were formerly observed. Among those was one which was very prevalent, especially among the poorer classes, some of whom believed implicitly in the truth of it. They would rise early on this day, and walk into the fields to see the sun dance," says a writer on ancient customs "which, says ancient tradition, it always does on this day."

The custom of giving eggs on Easter is observed in the Greek Churches, and in Russia the Emperor himself, when at Church on Easter morning, presents eggs to some of the members of congregation. This custom is said to have originated in the theology of the Egyptians, Persians, Gauls, Greeks, Romans, &c., among all of whom an egg was an emblem of the universe, the work of the Supreme Divinity. Easter and the New Year have been marked by similar distinctions. Among the Persians, the New Year is looked upon as the renewal of all things, and is noted for the triumph of the Sun of Nature, as Easter is with Christians for that of the Sun of Justice, the Saviour of the World, over death by his resurrection. The feast of the New Year was celebrated at the Vernal Equinox, that is, at a time when the Christians, removing their New Year to the winter solstice, kept only the Festival of Easter. Hence, with the latter the Feast of Eggs has been attached to Easter, so that eggs are no longer made presents of at the New Year.

In England, Ireland, and other countries, different games are played by the children with Eggs, which they harden by boiling, and color with juice of herbs. On Easter Sunday the altars of the different Catholic Churches are generally decorated with ornaments of various kinds, and some of them in the most costly style. — Ev. Post.

Growth of Chicago.

When in 1830, General Scott visited the military post at Fort Dearborn, at the mouth of the Chicago River, on Lake Michigan, the little hamlet numbered, including the garrison about two hundred inhabitants. Six years afterwards there were 456 arrivals at Chicago, which were equal to 60,000 tons, and in 1837 its population was 8,000, with 120 stores, (of which 20 were wholesale,) 30 physicians, and 50 lawyers.

About five years ago a convention met at Chicago, to further that policy of improvement of Western navigation to which the city may be said literally to own its very existence. For it was on the representation of General Scott made to Congress after his visit to Fort Dearborn in 1830, that the first appropriations were made for the improvement of its harbor by the erection of piers. How indispensable how imperative demanded by the interests of Western agriculture as well as trade, this policy was, and is pretty plainly shown by the growth of Chicago, which sprung forward as a race horse from the stand the instant that measure of aid was given by Congress.

When, in July 1847, this River and Harbor Convention met at Chicago, it contained in round numbers 17,000 inhabitants. In 1848 the city numbered 20,000 inhabitants. On the 1st of January, 1852, its population is estimated at 40,000. — Hunt's Merchants Magazine.
