JOB PRINTING,
Neatly executed at the "Register" Office.

Sound the Tocsin.
An Unprecedented Display of GOODS
At the Old Corner of Hamilton and James Streets Allentown.
The People's Store
Rome had her Cæsar, England her Cromwell, France her Napoleon Bonaparte, and Allentown, a

STORE
where goods may be purchased at the most reasonable prices, as any one can be satisfied who will call on
C. H. SAMSON,
late of the firm of Samson, Wagner & Co. who has just received a splendid lot of
SPRING GOODS
Which are the admiration of all who have viewed them. They are cheap, too, and no mistake—not cheap just on one yard of the counter and dear all over the other, but from side to side, from front to rear, and from top to bottom, whether COTTON, LINEN, SILK, or anything else you'll find. His motto is: "SMALL PROFITS AND QUICK SALES" with the Ready John Davis down—the only way to do business, "as is business."
Now he don't intend to enumerate what he has: he will not say a word about his sleek Cloths and Costumers; nor the elegant supply he purchased for Dresses for his Lady Friends;
nor about the Silks and Satins and Ribbons and the thousand other matters that go to make up a tip-top assortment, because he not only anticipates, but is sure, that all who expect to appear in unparalleled apparel, will come and see for themselves—judge for themselves, and buy for themselves, (just as he does when he goes to the city.)

His Groceries,
Consist of a large supply, selected with great care, and comprises all kinds of various articles in general use.
His QUEENSWARE embraces a beautiful assortment, from which a choice cannot fail to be made.
April 15. 1-6w

Ready Made Clothing!
A complete assortment of every description, cheaper than the cheapest.
Cloths, Cassimeres, &c., made up to the shortest notice, in a style calculated to surprise the Parisians, not the "Natives" only—and still he complies with his motto, "No fit no pay." With such inducements held out to an impartial public, a doubt would not for a moment doubt but what he is bound to eclipse all his competitors. And now take his advice
"Buy cheap while sluggards sleep,
And you will have goods to wear and keep."
So come one and all
And give me a call.
C. H. SAMSON.
April 15. 1-6w

FOR SALE.
The undersigned offers for sale a second hand Coal Gas Apparatus, which he will warrant to be able to furnish from 50 to 70 lights an evening. It will be put into operation at any place required, and will be sold at a great bargain.
He further informs the public that he will put up the Apparatus, at but a trifling cost. He will put up the Gas Works in villages of from 5 to 50 houses and furnish every thing required for permanent lights at but a trifling cost.
The Apparatus offered above is the one formerly used for lighting east Hamilton street. The wants of the community required more lights than this was able to furnish.

The Case of Joe Stansbury.
One of the best founding stories we ever read is found in the police corner of the Philadelphia Pennsylvania:
As Mrs. Esther Stansbury, (residing in a court running from Race below, sixth,) was about to bring a bucket of water from the hydrant last night she found an old basket suspended from the knob of her front door. Putting her hand into the basket, she felt something live and kicking—but so enveloped in rags that on further discovery could be made without unwrapping the object. A piece of paper folded like a letter, lay by the side of the animated bundle.—Mrs. Stansbury immediately returned into the house, and by the light of the lamp examined the billet. It was addressed to her husband. She tremulously broke the seal and read as follows:

Old Music—Old Friends.
Give me old music! let me hear
The songs of days gone by,
Nor stay thy voice in kindly fear,
If to thy notes a falling tear,
Should make a mate reply!
The songs that lulled me on the breast,
To sleep away the noon,
Sing on—sing on! I love them best,
There's witchery in the notes impressed
With each familiar tune.
Give me old friends!—the tried, the true,
Who launched their barks with me,
And all my joys and sorrows knew,
As chance's gales the pilgrim blew
Across the troubled sea.
Their memories are the same as mine—
Our love through life shall last;
Bring on, bring on, your smiles to shine
Upon our good old songs and wine.
Like sunbeams from the past!

Miscellaneous Selections.
The Loved and Lost.
The Journal of Commerce furnishes its readers with the following affecting sketch. It is a picture in real life—a vision of truth. Read it that your heart may be softened, and your soul made whole:
"A lady was riding some years since through Connecticut in her father's carriage, when they were brought to a stop by a woman coming from a cottage, near which they passed and beckoning to them. Drawing the reign tight and stopping his horses, Mr. T— waited her approach. As she came nearer, her face appeared intelligent and attractive, but melancholy withal and her eye was restless and roving; but as she reached the side of the carriage, and laid her hand on the window edge, she gazed with intense earnestness into the face of the lady, and asked 'have you seen William anywhere?'"
"Startling as the proximity of a deranged person manifestly must have been, the lady had sufficient presence of mind to assure her that she had not seen William, and the poor watcher by the roadside turned away with a sigh.
Years had passed and the incident was almost forgotten, when a few weeks ago, the same lady now the wife of a lawyer in this city, was riding through Fulton street in Brooklyn. A loud cry attracted her attention and looking at the sidewalk, she saw a woman with streaming hair and wild eyes, running down the street, screaming Willy, Willy, Willy, in a voice that seemed, as she described it to be, so unutterably mournful and thrilling that it must reach the ear of him she called, unless that ear was sealed in the silence of death.
"Was it the same person she had met long ago in Connecticut? and had her poor wandering brain been searching all these years for the boy she loved, and searching all in vain. Who was he, and where on the broad earth had he kept himself out of the reach of that wild love? She had asked a million persons if they had seen him and none knew him. She had called him in the forest, in the crowded city, in the day and in the night, now hopefully, now mournfully, and always he had answered not, or was he perchance beyond answering; and did the voice reach him in the land whence he might not reply to her; however much his soul yearned towards her? Mayhap, if so it be, and he strive hard,—mayhap some pleasant evening when she sits all alone and murmurs his name in accents of unchanging affection, God may grant to him utterance in tones that will reach her worn old heart, and then—how will it spring back through the long years, and with the freshness and beauty of youth and youthful love go forth to meet him? Or, in these lines will in one day go further than she can in a thousand if William be anywhere on the earth, and his conscience tells him he is wandering from the love he owes allegiance to, let him know when he read this, that there is ringing all through the world, now here, now there, a voice that is calling him mournfully, but oh how lovingly, back to arms that yearn to embrace him.

Proof of Psychology.—Take a cow, cut straw the length of grass, and put green spectacles on her, she will be so convinced that she is eating grass, that grass butter can be made from the milk.
A man out West, who owns a large farm, says he stacks up all the hay he can cut doors and the remainder he puts in his barn.
Honesty is the best policy.

TO JOE STANSBURY.
Sir—I send you the baby, which you will please to take good care of and bring up right, so that it may turn out to be a better man than its daddy.—Oh Joseph!—what a sly old rakk you are!—who would think that such a staid, sober old spindle shanks could be such a tearing-down sinner?—The child is yours. You may swear to that. Look at it,—it is Joe Stansbury all over. You deceived me shamefully, Joseph—letting on to be a widower—but do a father's part by the young one, and I'll forgive you. Your heart broken
NANCY.

P. S. Don't let the sharp-nosed wife of yours see this letter. Gammon her with some kind of a story about the baby.
Mr. Stansbury was in the basement kitchen quietly eating his supper, and little imagining what a storm was brewing over his head. The door of the kitchen was violently thrown open, and Mrs. S.'s voice yelled out—'Stansbury! come up here, you villain; here's a mess for you!' The astonished Stansbury hastily wiped his mouth and obeyed the summons. 'Don't you want to see Nancy?' the heart-broken Nancy! cried Mrs. Stansbury, when her guilty husband hobbled up into the room. 'Nancy!—what Nancy's that?' said the sly old rogue in well feigned perplexity. 'Why, Nancy, the mother of this baby that's been hung up at your door, Mr. Stansbury. Oh you look mighty innocent; but just read that letter, and then look in that basket. Don't be afraid it won't bite, it's got no teeth, poor thing!—you'll know it—for as your hussy says, it is just like you all over. Please goodness, I'll expose you before every body.'

And in less than five minutes Mrs. Stansbury had collected a room of spectators, to witness the process of unwrapping the baby. Anxious expectation sat on every countenance as the jealous lady tore away rag after rag from the body of the foundling—the vigorous movements of which astonished every body. 'It is full of the devil already,' said Mrs. S.; 'that shows it's his—you'll soon see that it's like him in every thing.' At last, all the swaddling clothes being removed, out jumped the baby, and made its escape through the open door.
It was a big tom cat. The Stansburys had been victimized by a practical joke, the contrivance of which was traced to a female neighbor. Mrs. S., who had no taste for fun of that kind made her complaints against the suspected party, but as the trick appeared to be without malice, no binding order took place.

Wonderful Cave in California.
A correspondent of the Calaveras Chronicle furnishes the following account of a wonderful cave in that country:—
Calaveras county seems to abound in natural curiosities, as there are many caves well worth visiting in this part of the country.—The great prevalence of lime-stone in our hill ranges will naturally account for these interesting formations. Lately I availed myself of the offer of a kind friend to conduct me to one of them, and was much pleased with my visit, although, I am sorry to say, that visitors seem to emulate each other in their zeal to deform and deface what should be most carefully guarded and protected. The cave to which I allude is situated about a mile from the town, on the south bank of the South Branch of Sutter Creek. The entrance is through a small opening in the hill, just sufficient to admit a man's body. The descent is easy, the many projections of the rock affording ample means for safe footing.
Neither is it of very great depth, the top of the platform not being more than ten feet from the entrance, whence it slopes gently down till the centre is reached, forming a chamber of about 20 feet high and about 50 long. The floor is composed of octagons of calcareous formation along which in a narrow bed silently glides a crystal stream, rising from a spring in one of the lateral chambers. The roof is divided into compartments, the centre being a large circle, from which depend clusters of stalactites of every variety, some crystalline others opaque, while some again partake of a variegated hue, as if tinged by coloring matter in the rock through which they have percolated. The graining of the roof is perfect as if moulded by the hand of art, terminating in massive pillars, with richly adorned capitals strongly reminding one of an ancient Gothic cathedral. From the main chamber branch two galleries, leading into small apartments rich in groups of the most fanciful petrification, varying from the massive rock to the most delicate and finely pointed crystalline needle.
