

The Iron Interest.

The great iron works at Boonton, New Jersey, are advertised for sale by the Sheriff on the first of the next month. These works have been in operation some twenty-two years and have paid out for labor an average of about $250,000 annually. The stockholders, we learn have received but ten per cent. in all on their investment; for in good times the money made was devoted to improving and extending the works and in bad times they had none to divide. The establishment closes with all debts paid except what is owing to some of its own stockholders for advances. In reference to the stoppage of this extensive concern which cannot longer continue business at a loss, the New York Tribune remarks:

We know what Free Traders say of such an occurrence as this—"The failure proves that these works ought never to have been constructed. Let them sink; if they fall, it is because we can get Iron cheaper elsewhere." But no, gentlemen! cheaper iron dollars (which are mere shillings) may be cheaper in products or actual values, we shall not. For much of the labor whereby these works produced Iron will not be so profitably employed elsewhere! much of the Capital embarked in that production is destroyed by this disaster; many of the products for which these Iron works made a market can never be so well sold elsewhere: The farmer who sold Hay there for twelve dollars per ton may now get as much for it in New York, but it will cost half of it to bring it here and sell it—and so of many things besides. What compensation for the loss of his home market to a seller of charcoal or cordwood at the Iron Works on Superior would be a like market at even double price, in Baltimore, when treble the value of his product would not pay the expense of transporting it thither?

The efficiency of the State Journal which have been so industriously and so perseveringly made by the adversaries of the protective policy, to induce the belief that an antagonism of interests existed between manufacturing and agricultural industry, has worked out so large an amount of mischief that we must believe the time for a wholesome reaction is at hand. The accidental occurrence of a great scarcity in Europe, arising from a failure of crops soon after the passage of the Tariff act of 1840, gave occasion to the advocates of that measure to take much glorification to themselves, and they pointed exultingly to the large foreign demand for grain, breadstuffs, and provisions, as illustrative of the beneficial effects of the new Tariff. The case presents a different aspect now—an aspect which must continue to grow worse and worse for the farmer, unless the Act of 1840, among its other results can be made to create another famine across the water.

The "Ancient Democracy."

The difficulty as to the identity of the two Demos is not greater than the recognition of the real Democrats from the counterfeits. The difficulty between the State Rights and Union wings has extended to Missouri. Col. Benton says:

"And who were they that dominated at Jefferson city, and prescribed the ancient Democracy? who were they? They were the old nullifiers of 1813, 1844 and 1849.—They were the Whig allies in all the elections in the general assembly in the last session. They were men who hold the rights of a State to secede when it thinks proper.—They were men who deny the right of Congress to legislate upon slavery in the territories, and assert the right of the States to resist the acts of Congress when they please. They were soft money men, always for banks and shipplasters, and ready to go for them again. They were old Whigs when young, and cannot yet repeat the Democratic creed. They were neophytes in the Democratic garden—exotic plants, without root or branch. They were fledglings from the Whig nest pinfeathers of Whiggery still sticking out of their backs and just big enough to run after a worm. And some still younger—little chicks just got out of the Whig egg with pieces of shell sticking to their behind. These were the chicks who assumed jurisdiction over Benton and his friends, and proscribed the ancient Democracy of Missouri—who thought themselves the State, and acted as such at Jefferson city."

Permanence Interments.

The late Rev. Dr. Alexander, in a work published a few years since, gives the following account of a remarkable incident in the life of Rev. Wm. Tennent:

"After a regular course of study in theology, Mr. Tennent was preparing for his examination by the presbytery, as a candidate for the Gospel Ministry. His intense application affected his health, and brought on a pain in his breast and a slight hectic. He soon became emaciated, and at length was like a living skeleton. His life was now threatened. He grew worse and worse. He was conversing with his brother in Latin, the state of his soul when he fainted in on the way. After the usual time, he had died. A board, according to the practice of the country, and the neighborhood were invited to attend his funeral on the next day. In the evening his physician returned from a ride in the country, and was afflicted beyond measure at the news of his death. He could not be persuaded that it was certain, and on being told that one of the persons who had laid out the body thought he had perceived a little tremor of the flesh under the arm, although the body was cold and stiff, he endeavored to ascertain the fact. He first put his own hand into warm water, to make it as sensitive as possible, and then felt under the arm and at the heart, and affirmed, that he felt an unusual warmth, though no one else could. He had the body placed in a warm bed, and insisted that the people who had been invited to attend. To this the brother objected, as absurd, the eyes being sunk, the lips discolored, and the whole body cold and stiff.—

Who is Franklin Pierce

In all personal qualities, Gen. Pierce, the nominee has the reputation of being a most estimable and worthy man. That he is a man of capacity and character is evident from the high positions he has occupied in civil life, in his native State, being successively a representative in the Legislature of New Hampshire, a member of Congress and a U. S. Senator, elected to the latter position at the early age of thirty years when most other men are just beginning their political career. Gen. Pierce is a native of Hillsborough county New Hampshire, which was also the birth-place of Daniel Webster and Lewis Cass. His family is a distinguished one. His father, Gen. Benjamin Pierce, was once Governor of the State, and his name is honorably mentioned in the war of 1812. Franklin was born in 1805, and is consequently in the prime of life, when mind and body are both vigorous and active. He graduated in Dartmouth College, and like most of the New England scholars, came forth with a mind well stored with information, ready, apt, and practical, which he chose, that of law, to reach a high and honorable rank, and commended him also to the political favors which he received at a very early age. He represented Hillsborough in the Legislature of his native State, was Speaker of the House in his twenty-fifth year, at twenty-eight a member of Congress, and at thirty U. S. Senator; a rapid career of political advancement seldom attained by any young man—the best proof of his capacity and talents, and the high consideration in which they were held.—

He subsequently resigned his seat in the Senate to prefer his profession, and does not appear again in public life till appointed by President Polk as one of the Brigadier Generals authorized to be raised for the additional regiments recruited for the Mexican war. His selection for this important service is another proof of the impression which his character and abilities had made upon the minds of the highest public men of the country. Gen. Pierce did not join the main body of the army till it had arrived before the City of Mexico. Cadwalader had cleared the road between the capital and Vera Cruz effectually of the guerrillas, and Pierce, with three thousand men followed, almost undisturbed by the enemy, till he reached the General-in-Chief, who was preparing for his masterly attack upon the City of Mexico. The first battle fought before the walls of the capital was at Contreras, and Pierce's brigade participated largely in the victory. The ground upon which this battle was fought was the worst upon which an army probably ever operated. Broken rocks, ravines, patches of lava sides of mountains had all to be overcome, making the movements exceedingly difficult and dangerous. The horse of Gen. Pierce stumbled among the rocks, threw him and severely injured him. The battle was won through the daring and bravery of our troops, and as they pressed to the second victory at San Antonio.—Pierce though still suffering from his hurts, again took the field at the head of his brigade. The fight at San Antonio was a fiercely-contested action against vastly superior numbers of the enemy. Gen. Scott, in his official account, says, "I sent Pierce (just able to keep his saddle) with his brigade, Pillow's division, conducted by Capt. Lee, engineer, by a third road, a little further to the left to attack the enemy's right and rear in order to favor the movement upon convent (by Worth and Pillow) and cut off the enemy's retreat towards the capital. All the movements," he says, "were conducted with alacrity by our gallant troops and commanders," and the battle was won, making the second brilliant achievement that morning.—The troops then prepared for the third victory at Churubusco, where the entire Mexican force, twenty seven thousand men, was posted. This was a series of engagements, in which all the divisions of the army were employed. Pierce's brigade was under Shields, a senior brigadier. Shields's duty was to turn the enemy's works, to prevent the escape of the garrison. Gen. Scott says the "action was long, hot and varied, but, ultimately, success crowned the zeal and gallantry of our troops. Brigadier-General Pierce, from the hurt of the evenings before—under pain and exhaustion—fainted in the action." Scott calls him the "gallant soldier," a mark of distinction from an old soldier, which sufficiently attest his bravery and skill.

Liberal Contribution.—At the dedication of the new Lutheran Church of Pottsville, on Sunday 23d ult., a collection was made for paying the balance due on the building. The amount subscribed and paid down, exceeded $3000—being $1000 more than was required to pay off the indebtedness.

Vampire.

Not long since, a young girl, eleven years of age, who lived in Paris, attempted to murder her mother, sister and many of her playmates, for the purpose of drinking their blood. After a careful examination by a scientific man, it was declared that she was subject to the strange and terrible mania of cannibalism. As she was extremely young this strange perversion of natural instinct afforded a prospect of cure. All will remember the sergeant who used at midnight to leave his quarters, and dig up bodies in Pere la Chase, which he subsequently devoured. This unfortunate man is now cured and is but thirty-two years of age. He preserves of the episodes of his past life only a confused memory, like the recollection of a painful dream.—In other days, science feared to approach these sufferers.

In 1779, a young man named Ferrage, under the influence of this mania, suddenly left his companions, and surrendered himself up to this horrible propensity. He selected, as his retreat, a cavern near the top of one of the mountains of Aure, whence he used to descend, like a bat of prey, into the champagne country, killing all the women; he could eat nothing else, and was constantly seen to gaze, as if in wait for an opportunity to seize his prey. He never went abroad without a double barreled gun, a belt full of pistols, and a dagger. So great was the terror that he inspired, that he used frequently to come into towns for food and ammunition, without any molestation.

A peasant, whom he suspected of a design upon him, had his house burned over his head. He used to decoy any muleteers he chanced to discover in the woods to his den, where they were uniformly murdered. A large reward was offered for his capture in vain, until a bold peasant insinuated himself into his confidence, and captured him. This beast of prey, for such he was, was executed on the 12th of December, 1792. He was broken alive on the wheel. For four years he had lived exclusively as a cannibal.

Born on a Railroad.—An emigrant woman gave birth to a child in the cars of the Baltimore and Susquehanna Railroad one day last week. The mother and child proceeded to Pittsburg without any detention.

Important to Bounty Land Claimants.—Mr. Heath, Commissioner of Pensions, has given notice that many who have failed to receive land warrants of forty and eighty acres, under the act of 25th of September, 1850, will be entitled thereon to proof of additional service ascertained by the distance travelled at the periods of enrollment and discharge—one day being allowed for every twenty miles of such distance. The place of enrollment, and the place from which the Company marched, and officers, as well as the point where the claimant was mustered into service, and the distance between each, must also be stated and attested by two witnesses, certified to be credible.

Another Scientific Wonder.—Pepsin? an artificial Digestive Fluid Gastric Juice? A great Dyspepsia Curer, prepared from Rennet, or the fourth stomach of the Ox, after directions of Baron Liebig, the great Physiological Chemist, by J. S. Houghton, M. D., No. 11, North Eighth Street, Philadelphia, Pa. This is a truly wonderful remedy for Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Jaundice, Liver Complaint, Constipation, and Debility, curing after Nature's own method by Nature's own agent, the Gastric Juice. See advertisement in another column.

Attention! Make Room FOR THE Clothing Emporium OF KECK & LEH.

They take this method to inform their friends and the public in general that they still continue the MERCHANT TAILORING Business at their old stand, directly opposite the "Lehigh Register" printing office, and that they—although much is said at other places of low prices—will sell as cheap, if not cheaper, than at any other establishment, in this or any other place, and if any thing, still a little cheaper. They will always keep on hand, a full supply of Ready-Made Clothing, of every description, and have on hand at present a large supply of seasonable goods, at their "Emporium." They are both practical Mechanics, and no work is suffered to pass unless fully examined by them, so they can warrant them to be not only durable, but made up with neatness and taste. Will be punctually attended to, and made up to order in the most fashionable manner, no matter whether the goods are bought elsewhere, they will be thankfully received. They are thankful for favors heretofore received, and they will make it point to serve all with entire satisfaction, which they trust will secure to them more favors and be the means to extend their custom still further. Call and examine their stock, before you purchase elsewhere, and satisfy yourselves with what is said above. Allentown April 29.
